Reinforcements of Hurricane Planes Great Aid to Defenders

Royal Air Force Recovers Part of Superiority in the Air

SINGAPORE, Jan. 22 (AP)—The British Imperial line northwest of Singapore lunged today in what appeared to be the first strong counter-offensive yet launched by the defenders, and reinforcements of Hurricane fighters went into action to shorten the ratio of the enemy's aerial superiority.

British, Australian and Indian troops, covered in their initial advance by heavy artillery fire, were engaged in a great and perhaps decisive struggle with the bulk of the invading forces in the rough Bukit Payong hill area above Batu Caves in Western Malaya—a wild, mountainous ground 70 miles above Singapore itself.

This strong counter-thrust, which was planned by general officers in the war council held under the shade of the rubber trees, was intended to modify the western British anchor of the northern Johore state and to rescue the survivors of two Australian battalions and one Indian battalion which had been isolated just north of the Muar river.

It was accompanied by new fighting on the eastern end of the front, also in an area about seventy miles north of this base—below the port of Endau. British forces, which they had yielded earlier in the week, and successfully ambushed Japanese detachments seeking to creep down the difficult coastal area.

While British troops thus seized the initiative afield, the Royal Air Force was in dogged action both in the defense of Singapore, and against Japanese transport. In a single Japanese forward area many of the invaders' trucks and cars were smashed by British bombs and the surviving units of the convoy were machine-gunned from low altitudes.

A second attack in the same area smashed other Japanese transports and flung machine-gun slugs into Japanese staff cars.

Here in Singapore, where 591 had been killed and more than 1,000 wounded in Japanese air raids of the past two days, five Japanese bombers were shot down today and a Japanese fighter was hit.

It was clear that the RAF's Hurricane reinforcements were making more and more costly to attack the base.

"Bull Trouble" Delays Telephone Linemen

ATHENS, O., Jan. 22 (AP)—Employees of the Athens Home Telephone Company reported "bull trouble" as the cause of a delay in erecting a pole. Lineman H. H. Burk sat for an hour at the top of the pole while the bull charged. Three other members of the crew reached safety behind a fence.

Polyglot Crew Seizes Jap Ship And Brings It to American Port

SEATTLE, Jan. 22 (AP)—A story of a mutiny on the high seas by a polyglot crew, determined to keep a Japanese-chartered ship from reaching Yokohama, came today from Seattle's waterfront.

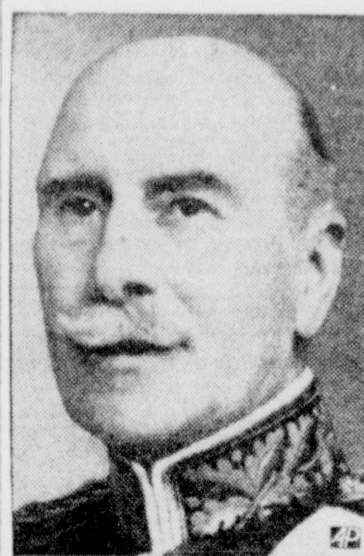

The crew seized the ship after Japan's attack on Hawaii, steered for a friendly Pacific port and armed over the Japanese officers by the American authorities. Identification of either the ship or crew would be a violation of naval regulations.

The dramatic story was authenticated by reliable authorities as follows:

The former Dutch freighter, loaded with 4,000 tons of coal, was seized miles off the Japanese coast December 7 when the air waves brought accounts of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Argentina Breaks Away from Plan To Defeat Axis

Sen. Connally's Remarks Blamed for Deadlocking of Conference

RIO DE JANEIRO, Jan. 22 (AP)—Argentina deadlocked the pan-American conference again tonight with efforts to weaken still more the already revised resolution calling for an eventual diplomatic rupture with the Axis, and some observers attributed these new difficulties to Argentine resentment over Senator Connally's remarks yesterday in Washington.

Political leaders here said that Argentina apparently had swung into line last night about the time the United States Senate Foreign Relations committee had declared "we are trusting that Castillo (acting president of Argentina) will change his mind, or that the Argentine people will change their president."

Connally's statement had followed one by Castillo in which the acting president in Buenos Aires declared that "right or wrong," Argentina would not modify her opposition to the rupture resolution.

Argentina's Position

In Buenos Aires tonight, Castillo, in another published interview—a method by which he is making himself heard over his own delegates at Rio de Janeiro—declared that Argentina was "in solidarity with the American nations, but we do not agree that an attack on the part of the nations of America signifies that all others take the position of belligerence."

The present resolution does not call for a state of belligerence, but it is Argentina's implicit fear that a break with the Axis would put her into the war.

Chile, which had accepted the original compromise along with Argentina, was reported to be standing firm in that acceptance.

The wording which the Argentines first accepted and then rejected was the statement that the American republics "cannot continue" (Continued on Page 2, Col. 4)

Earl of Athlone Seeks Way To Get Troops for Overseas

OTTAWA, Jan. 22 (AP)—Canada announced today a popular election on the bitterly-debated question of whether the dominion will conscript troops for service overseas. Warning solemnly that the war is "a world wide conflict between irreconcilable forces," the Earl of Athlone, governor-general announced the government "would seek, by means of a plebiscite, release from any obligation arising out of any past commitments restricting the methods of raising men for military service."

The date was not set. Six months before the war Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said that so long as his government was in power, there would be no conscription of Canadians for overseas service. He has reiterated that commitment on several occasions—as recently as last Nov. 12—and as a result, Canadian forces overseas in more than two years of war have been limited to volunteers.

Earl Urges Change

Today the Earl of Athlone, making the speech from the throne in opening the third session of Canada's nineteenth Parliament, spoke of these commitments as having been made "prior to the spread of the war to all parts of the world," and urged that the government now "possess complete freedom to act in accordance with its judgment of the needs of the situation as they may arise."

The governor-general said plainly that Canadians must expect "an expansion of the establishment of the Canadian army overseas" and that the dominion must produce more munitions and foodstuffs.

Asks Selective Service

Selective service, he added, would be extended to effect the "orderly and efficient employment of the men and women of Canada for the varied purpose of war," and there will be "as complete as possible a mobilization of the material resources and manpower of the country."

Canadian troops who volunteered for overseas service fought valiantly at Hongkong in December. There are more than 100,000 of them in the United Kingdom. Some of these participated in last September's expedition of Spitsbergen. Just before the fall of France a Canadian force reached the French coast, but it was withdrawn before it had a chance to meet the enemy. Some Canadians are at Gibraltar.

Voted by House For War's Needs

Almost Half of Huge Sum Will Be Used for Merchant Marine

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—With little debate, the House passed and sent to the Senate today a $2,096,048,875 appropriation to finance operations of forty-three independent agencies of the government during the twelve months beginning next July 1. Almost half of the total was for continued expansion of the merchant marine.

The so-called independent agencies are those, such as the Interstate Commerce Commission, which are not under any government department.

Republicans complained during the debate that reductions in non-defense activities were insufficient, and made four attempts to cut individual items. However, they succeeded only in making a $90,000 cut in a proposed $900,000 appropriation for the tariff commission.

Provides for New Ships

The bill the first regular supply bill for the 1943 fiscal year, carried $364,410,800 for construction and operation of the merchant fleet. Chairman Emory S. Land of the Maritime Commission said 1,422 new ships would be completed during the fiscal year.

Publication of testimony given by Land at closed committee hearings disclosed that he said the ship will have to face a court.

Hawaii Defenses Strengthened by U. S. Army Forces

Other Points Also Get Help, but Details Are Kept Secret

Gigantic Movement of Men and Weapons under Way in the U. S.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—A stream of American reinforcements for the southwestern Pacific has now started, a high United States official revealed today, adding that the production of big American bombers and other factors have largely offset the advantages Japan gained by her surprise blow at Pearl Harbor.

Because of the necessity of guarding information that might be of value to the enemy, the official declared details could not be divulged at this time.

Hawaii Strengthened

He did say, however, that in addition to these reinforcements for the far Pacific, the army had been able to strengthen the defenses of Hawaii and the Pacific coast of the United States to a greater degree than ever before.

He also revealed a tremendous movement of troops within the United States. In less than seven weeks that have elapsed since Pearl Harbor, he asserted, 600,000 troops have been shifted to new locations, and the great task was performed with a speed and smoothness which brought the exclamation "miraculous" from one railroad.

Clyde-Mallory Freighter Sunk

Brazos Goes Down after Collision Off Southern Coast

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (AP)—The third naval district announced today that the Clyde-Mallory freighter, Brazos, 4,497 tons, had sunk Jan. 13 after a collision off the southern United States coast. Identity of the other ship was not revealed. All thirty-five of the crew were saved.

They were landed at Charleston, S. C. The ship, long known in the coastwise trade between New York, Galveston and Charleston, was commanded by Capt. C. L. Stone, a native of Maine (town not known).

The Brazos was built forty-three years ago at Newport News, Va. The navy said the collision occurred 150 miles southeast of Cape Hatteras in an area known to be traversed by enemy submarines.

The navy said twenty-three survivors had already reached New York via rail and nine would reach there tomorrow.

Two men were injured, the navy said. They were not immediately identified.

(The navy listed the crew at thirty-four, but the company said it totaled thirty-five.)

New Time Law Is Simple and Carries No Penalties If You Don't Prefer It

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—The new time law should be simple, as some officials see it—all you need do is set your watches and clocks ahead one hour, wherever you are, and then forget about daylight savings.

The legislation is plain. It provides that the standard time in each time zone shall be advanced one hour at 2 a. m. on Feb. 9, and that this shall remain in effect until six months after the war ends.

The effect is not so simple, of course. It raises some questions, including these:

Who is affected by the new time? Legally, only common carriers, the federal government, and the time at which legal rights shall accrue for persons subject to the jurisdiction of the United States.

Actually, of course, the new time will affect everyone.

What will it be called?

No Official Name

Probably a lot of names that can't be printed, but the legal name is "United States standard Eastern (or Central, Mountain or Pacific, depending on the zone) time." It isn't officially known as daylight saving, even though it has that effect.

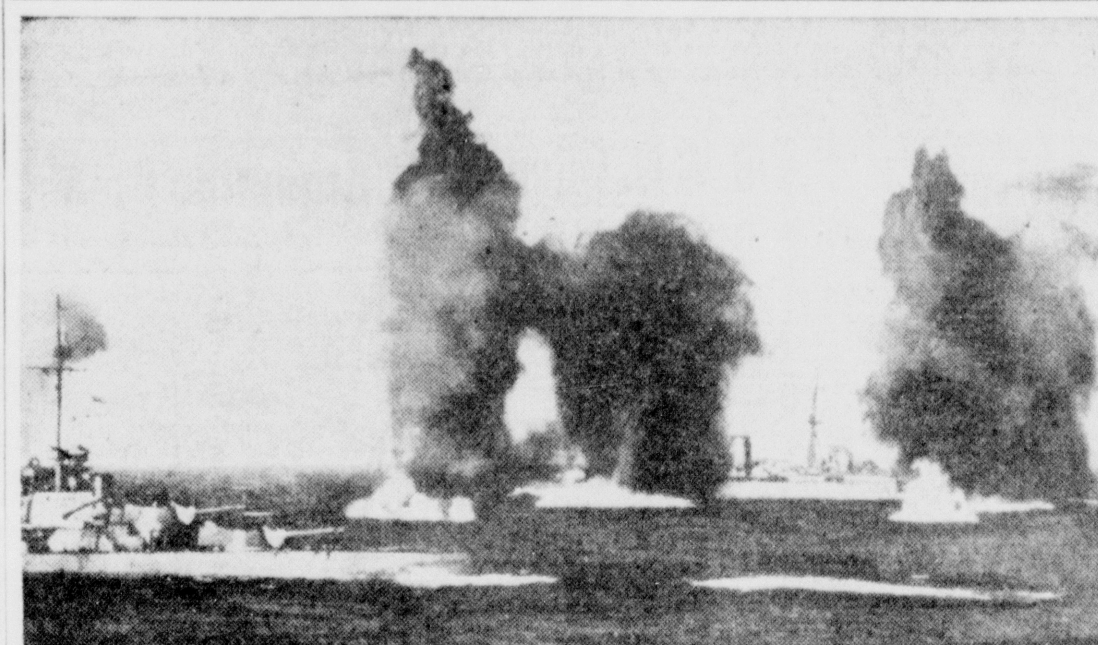

What if one does not observe the new time?

If you work for a common carrier, (railroad, pipeline, steamship or bus) or for the government, you must hear about it. However, the law makes no provisions for enforcement or for penalties.

Will radio use the new time? Emphatically! They campaigned for it for many months.

BRITISH CONVOY RUNS GAUNTLET OF NAZI ATTACK

The British Admiralty released this photo, showing an actual attack on a British convoy in the Mediterranean by Axis aircraft. The three waterspouts mark the explosion of heavy bombs in the water. British ship behind the bursts appears to be a destroyer. Ship at left is a battleship. The caption said the navy brought the convoy through successfully.

Foundation Laid For Greatest of All War Programs

Report Prepared at Request of President Shows Great Progress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—In a "report to the nation" on America's armament effort in the last eighteen months, the Office of Facts and Figures said today that "good strong foundations" had been laid for the greatest war program in history and that the United States and Britain would soon outstrip the Axis in plane output.

"More important," said the overall review prepared at President Roosevelt's request, "we shall have the plant capacity to increase our production to the point where we can seize control of the air in all areas of the world struggle."

Many Mistakes Admitted

Stressing that only a "beginning" had been made and that many mistakes would have to be corrected, the 20,000-word report listed great strides in output of ships, tanks, guns and ammunition, placed the army's ultimate goal in enlisted strength at 7,000,000 men, and described Lend-Lease aid as having grown from a trickle to a stream that would soon be a river.

(The Office of Facts and Figures was established several months ago by the president to supervise the issuance of defense information releases by all government agencies.)

It is headed by Archibald MacLellan, librarian of Congress.

The report said the navy had 346 combat ships under construction when Japan struck at Pearl Harbor to add to the 345 already built, that preparations were under way to meet any Axis push eastward by construction of bases in the western Pacific area, and that the army ferrying command, with $500,000,000 of lend-lease funds for servicing and delivery costs, had already delivered more than 1,000 planes purchased by the British for use in all theaters.

Noting that the aim is to step up the rate of spending for war production, the report said:

COMMITTEE AGREES ON PRICE MEASURE

Senate and House Conferees Reach Accord for Broad Control for Duration of the War

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—A joint congressional committee reached agreement tonight on a broad wartime price control measure which Senate and House spokesmen said would win final congressional approval.

Senate conferees bowed to the criticism of President Roosevelt by dropping the controversial attempt to tie farm price to urban wages.

However, the conference committee turned down his request for a "single responsible administrator" and gave the secretary of agriculture a virtual veto power over any price ceilings fixed by the price administrator.

Sen. Brown Pleased

"I think we have a good workable bill now," Senator Brown (D-Mich.), chairman of the Senate conferees, said a score of reporters.

Rep. Steagall (D-Ala.), head of the House conferees, said he would ask the house to agree to the conference compromise tomorrow and predicted approval.

The conference committee had labored seven-days to iron out differences between price control bills previously passed by Senate and House. Brown and Steagall said the compromise contained these provisions:

Principal Provisions

A licensing system for business affected by price maximums. Business violating the maximums would risk losing their licenses to do business.

A single price administrator, whose orders could be appealed to the courts.

A clause empowering the price administrator to buy and sell commodities in order to affect prices. This power could be used only to increase production.

Farm Price Ceilings

A provision declaring that farm price ceilings must not be fixed lower than the highest of the following levels: average farm prices on October 1, 1941, or December 15, 1941; average farm prices for 1939-40; or 110 per cent of parity price levels.

(Parity is a price which would give farm products the same purchasing power they had in the 1909-14 period.)

A provision, sponsored by Senator Bankhead (A-Ala.), requiring prior approval by the secretary of agriculture of any farm price orders by the administrator.

A prohibition against price ceilings on commodities, largely dairy products, now handled under the federal marketing agreements administered by the secretary of agriculture.

Senator Brown estimated that living costs might advance from eleven to fifteen per cent under the compromise farm price restrictions before price ceilings could be applied.

Senator Bankhead said government economists had forecast a rise of about five per cent in the price of farm products during the next year but Senators Brown and Taft (R-Ohio) said they expected a greater increase.

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (AP)—American anti-aircraft gunners are shooting down one out of every seven of the Japanese planes which intermittently bomb their positions in the Philippines, Time magazine's correspondent Melville Jacoby reported today from the fortress of Corregidor.

"On regular bombing days," Jacoby wrote, "you get a few minutes warning from a loud-sounding siren or from the ring of steel, or from men beating pots and pans."

"Sometimes we sense planes coming before the alarm sounds. Then a shout echoes from dugout to dugout: 'Tojo's coming!'"

"On the ground everyone except the gun crews take cover, but every body watches the sky. Everyone is keyed to the first noise of the bombs ripping through the bright clear sky."

Entire Invading Army Massed for Decisive Assault

Ten Divisions and Auxiliary of Japanese Troops in Action

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—The Japanese, with 200,000 troops on Luzon and reinforcements still arriving, today directed hammer blows at General Douglas MacArthur's army in an apparent attempt to crush it by sheer numbers.

Reporting that enemy attacks were being intensified all along the narrow front on Batan peninsula, the war department said that the entire Japanese Fourteenth army and other units had now been massed on the island of Luzon.

Commanded by Bulky, English-speaking Lieutenant General Masaharu Homma, the force included possibly ten divisions and auxiliary troops numbering altogether 200,000 or more men. Only in the drive on Singapore are larger enemy forces being employed, observers believed.

A raid by seventeen bombers on Cebu, the Philippines' second city, which was reported at the same time, suggested enemy intent to occupy other island areas which thus far have escaped invasion.

Major Link with U. S.

Cebu, about 150 miles south of Luzon on the island of Cebu, has been a major link in communications between the United States and unoccupied sections of the Philippines. Whether radio facilities there are damaged or put out of commission by the raid, which took place Sunday, was not disclosed by the war department.

The sombre picture in the China Sea area was lightened somewhat by a report from a high government official that since December 7 a stream of reinforcements had been started to the southwest Pacific, while, meantime, defenses on Hawaii and the United States Pacific coast had been made stronger than ever before.

The temporary advantage in naval strength that Japan gained by treachery was declared to have been largely offset by the mounting production and use of American long range bombers. Whether the reinforcements were other than aerial was left unsaid.

Heavy Fighting Reported

In the morning communiqué, the war department said particularly heavy fighting had developed along the left flank and center of General MacArthur's line, now believed to be about twenty-five miles north of the fortress of Corregidor. Enemy reinforcements were said to be landing both at nearby Subic Bay and farther north on Lingayen Gulf.

Reputed in earlier attempts to turn the right flank of the little American-Philippine army and batter it southward along the single highway leading to Corregidor, the Japanese are making their new efforts to advance in exceptionally rugged jungle country.

General MacArthur's left flank extends to the Batan peninsula coast only a few miles from Bin-

Standard Type of World Currency Urged by Morgenthau in Statement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (AP)—Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., today envisioned a post-war world freed of all problems of monetary exchange through use of a standard type of currency in international transactions.

He disclosed at a press conference that his representatives at the American republics meeting in Rio de Janeiro are trying to start the idea with the Americas. He added that he hoped that eventually the whole world would adopt such a plan.

Nearly every country in the world has its own kind of money and one of the major problems of peace time trade has been fluctuations in the value of different currencies in terms of the others. The difficulty has been particularly acute, officials said, in Latin America and has hindered trade with those countries.

Explaining his idea, Morgenthau said that if some unit of currency "common to all of the republics and to Canada" could be established "it would help the flow of trade and would make us all that much closer to each other."

The currency idea is part of a broad program of economic cooperation being fostered by the United States delegation at Rio. Other features include lowering of tariff and other trade barriers, and assistance for the development in mining, industry and transportation in Latin America.

Secretary of State Hull told his press conference that most, if not all, on the points in the program were receiving consideration but officials said, in Latin America and has

Japanese Force Lands on Island Near Australia

Marines Invade New Britain after Two Heavy Air Attacks

MELBOURNE, AUSTRALIA, Friday, Jan. 23 (P)—Japanese marines, in their first invasion of Australian territory, were believed today to have landed on New Britain island 800 miles off the northern mainland after a withdrawing garrison fired and dynamited dock installations at Rabaul, its capital.

A radio flash from Rabaul at 4 p. m. yesterday (A. S. M. E. S. T.) said that eleven Japanese vessels including warships had been sighted forty-five miles offshore bearing down on the island.

That was the last word from Rabaul which had undergone two heavy Japanese air attacks during the day.

An Australian army bulletin issued last night said:

Believe Town Evacuated

"It is considered that the stations were demolished by our forces and it is probable that the town has been evacuated."

"It is not known presently whether any Japanese forces have attempted to land."

The communique said the eleven Japanese ships were seen thirty miles off Watson Island, which is fifteen miles northwest of Rabaul in St. George's channel between New Britain and New Ireland, both Australian mandates in the Bismarck archipelago.

The London radio also reported that three Japanese aircraft carriers had been sighted off New Guinea, the British and Dutch mandated island lying west of New Britain on the road to The Netherlands East Indies.

For two days officials had warned that heavy Japanese air raids on both New Britain and New Guinea were the prelude to invasion, but last night's announcement electrified Australia.

While newspapers cried out for killed air reinforcements, defense officials planned to blackout all cities on the mainland, and also began accepting enlistments from resident aliens—Germans, Austrians, Danes, Italians and Czechs.

Eager to Fight Axis

These aliens, eager to fight the Axis, flocked to join the defense militia units and recruiting sergeants smiled grimly as they wrote down such birthplaces as Berlin, Hamburg, Rome, and Prague.

Rabaul was the main defense point for all of New Britain, a volcanic island still not entirely explored. Australian air units apparently based there have been attacking Japanese invasion bases in the Caroline Islands far to the north.

Japanese bombers escorted by fighter planes—the first indication that aircraft carriers were nearby—have attacked the capital for several days in increasing strength.

Officials pointed out that Japanese possession of New Britain would give the invaders another foothold for the grand strategy of closing in on Singapore over 3600 miles to the west.

The South Pacific is dotted with a rich island chain producing oil, rubber, rice and other products, extending from New Britain to New Guinea, Celebes, Borneo, and the other Netherlands East Indies.

Complete battle kits similar to those issued to the regular army were handed out to local militia units.

The press also reflected growing alarm both because of the New Britain developments and the situation in Malaya above Singapore.

The Melbourne Sun in a typical editorial said:

"We sent troops from this country and poured equipment into other theaters of war on the strength of assurances that Singapore guaranteed Australia's safety."

"Singapore, we were informed by an impressive array of experts, was impregnable."

"Admittedly it has not fallen yet, but we are entitled to ask that an adequate proportion of the vast resources commanded by our allies should be concentrated in protecting this vital fortress."

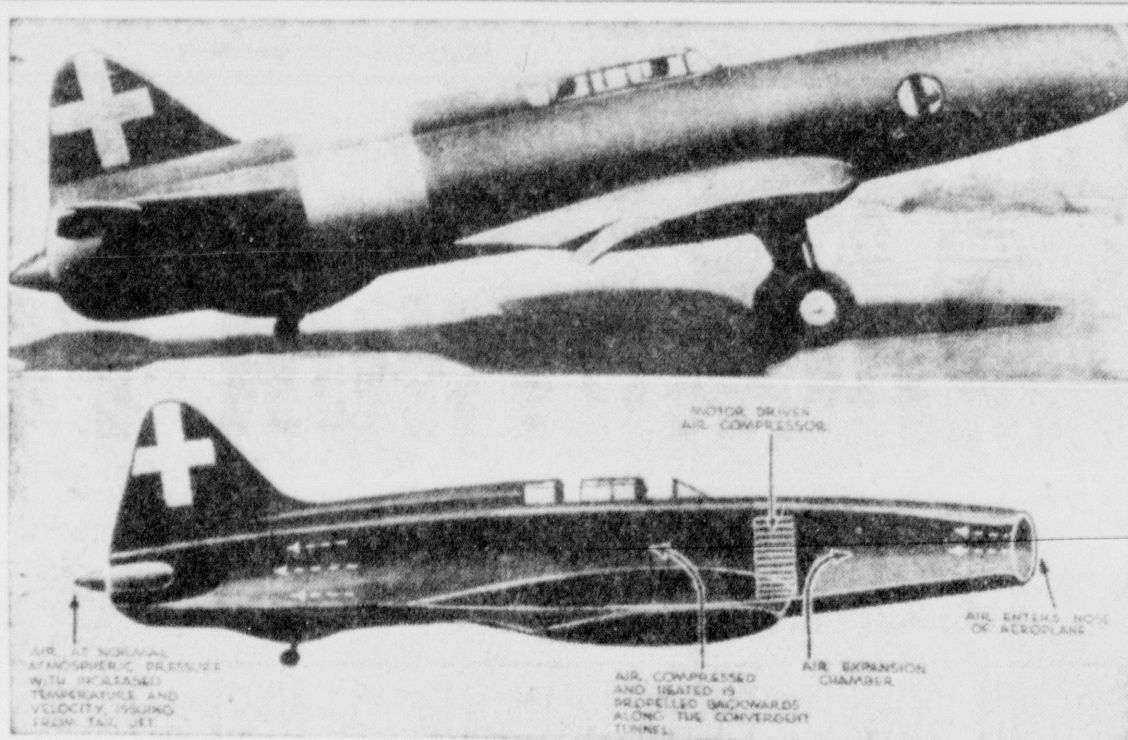

Land Reports Progress

Land reported to the committee that "very good to excellent" progress was being made on the new construction in this country, but that strikes and lack of turbines and gears had slowed down the output to some extent.

The bill also carried $110,909,088 for the Veterans Administration; $136,100,000 for the Tennessee Valley Authority; and $108,358,000 for civil service retirement and disability payments.

THE ITALIAN 'HOT AIR' PLANE

Dubbed the "hot air plane" and the "flying cigar," this is Italy's new propellerless plane. According to the London magazine "Aeroplane," the Caproni-Campini craft is propelled by a jet of air discharged behind the tail. The air centers through a circular duct in the open nose, is expanded and passed into a motor-driven compressor. The compressed air is heated and forced back through a tunnel and ejected from the tail jet.

A Filipino nurse, Rebecca Salvacion, was left behind in some manner after her station was bombed; she crawled from a shelter trench to help a wounded marine, summoning an army doctor, Capt. Benjamin Kysor of Oswego, N. Y.

American Doctor Killed

"The marine was huddled under cover," the account continued. "There, while bombs rocked the building, Dr. Kysor coolly dressed the wound."

"The Marine was carried down stairs," Dr. Kysor remained behind. A few minutes later the Jap registered a direct hit on the hospital and Dr. Kysor died."

Charles A. Groves Ordered Not To Sell Business

Decree Is Signed by Court in Connection with Divorce Suit

Charles Albert Groves, proprietor of the Wonder Bar on Virginia avenue, yesterday was forbidden by court order to sell, transfer or otherwise dispose of his business or to withdraw or conceal any bank deposits he may have.

The restraining order was signed by Associate Judge William A. Huster in connection with the divorce suit of Mrs. Mary Virginia Groves. Seeking a partial divorce on grounds of cruelty, Mrs. Groves alleged that she had reason to believe that her husband would undertake to sell his business, withdraw "large" bank deposits and leave the state in order that she and her two daughters might never receive any money from him for their support.

The bill of complaint, filed by Paul M. Fletcher, attorney, says the couple was wed some seventeen years ago and charges that Groves' alleged cruelty to his wife had become increasingly intolerable until it finally reached the point that she was "afraid to continue living with him."

Mrs. Groves explains she had from time to time in the past received money in inheritance which she used to maintain her home and her family, but that these funds were "long since exhausted."

Two years ago, the suit states, her husband established a restaurant and bar at 218 Virginia avenue which became highly profitable partly as a result of her efforts. Despite this prospering business, it goes on, Groves allowed her only $10 weekly to pay for food and clothing for herself and her two children.

At the same time, by "threats and intimidation," he sought to force her to acquiesce in his getting a divorce from her although her conduct as a wife was "above reproach," the petition says.

Groves boasted of his large income which his wife helped him gain, which she asserted, and in his alleged efforts to coerce her into giving him a divorce told her that if she did not consent he would sell the business, withdraw his bank deposits and leave the state in order that she would "never receive one cent" for herself and the children.

The suit alleges that Groves had a "substantial bank account" at least one Cumberland bank and says that it is feared he will undertake to dispose of or conceal to avoid payment of alimony and to defraud his wife of her rights.

In addition to asking for payment of alimony and custody of the children, the suits seeks, too, an order entitling Mrs. Groves to that part of her husband's estate to which she is entitled by law and equity.

The court order signed by Judge Huster also restrains Groves from molesting his wife in any way.

B. & O. Engineer Dies Suddenly Of Heart Attack

Oscar E. Pace, 60, of Brunswick, Dies on Way to Local Hospital

A Baltimore and Ohio railroad freight engineer died early this morning while enroute to the Memorial hospital after he had suffered a heart attack while his train was standing near Patterson Creek, about eighteen miles east of Keyser, W. Va.

Pace was at the throttle of locomotive 6109 which was called out last night to move the train from Keyser to Brunswick.

The Brunswick man entered the company's employ as a fireman November 24, 1910, and since August 26, 1920, he served as an engineer on the B. & O. railroad.

Two Men Enlist In Army at Local Recruiting Office

Two men joined the United States Army yesterday at the local recruiting station, according to Staff Sgt. Clarence Biehn. One of the men, Herbert R. Whetzel, of Franklin, W. Va., recently completed an enlistment in Panama and has been sent to Langley Field, Va., where he will be an automobile mechanic in the Ordnance Department. Robert W. Seel, of Mt. Savage, was the other enlistment. He was sent to the army of the United States unassigned.

Many Missionaries To Work in U. S.

BALTIMORE, Jan. 22 (P)—New fields within United States will be opened to missionaries who have been forced to remain in this country because of war conditions abroad, the board of foreign missions of the United Lutheran church announced today in concluding its two-day meeting.

Missionaries evacuated because of war and fellowmen who could not return to their foreign assignments will be re-assigned to domestic fields.

Hawaii Defenses

president who was in a position to judge the job.

Hawaii has long been considered a key position in the defenses of the Pacific coast. It and the fleet were relied upon heavily, and due to the necessity of sending defensive materials to the points where they were considered more urgently needed, the defenses of the Pacific coast proper had lagged somewhat.

When the Japanese staged their sneak raid on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, first reports (which later proved exaggerated) aroused some anxiety about the Pacific coast therefore, the army sent almost its entire force of bombers speeding to the defensive task, plus fighter planes, etc.

There also was a tremendous movement of men and weapons, which was facilitated greatly by recent development of emergency storage yards, ports of embarkation, and other establishments.

The American production of long-range bombers. It was pointed out, has increased, and is due to increase more in the near future. Beginning in the summer of last year, it was stated, reinforcements in the form of heavy bombers were dispatched to the Philippines. Many of these have since been put out of commission, but enough of them remain in action in the far Pacific area to make up for some of the loss suffered upon surface craft at Pearl Harbor.

relations with the Axis.

Argentina was reported insisting on changing it to read: "May not be able to continue."

Draws Fine Point

The "cannot continue" text was reported received by Castillo at 1 a. m., and the formal acceptance meeting scheduled for 4 p. m. subsequently was called off.

The new deadline for Argentina was to be the political committee session scheduled for Friday afternoon, but the secretary to the Argentine delegation said, "final word has not been received from Buenos Aires."

One source said, "we seem to be back where we were before," and Mexico's Foreign Minister Ezequiel Padilla summed up:

"It's a grammatical drama." New Demands Presented

United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull quickly disavowed governmental responsibility for Conally's remarks, but the Argentine delegation nevertheless presented new demands when the conference's political committee met today.

Several committee sessions were held, including a fifty-minute one tonight, but no solution was found. United States Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, Brazilian Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha, and the many other delegates attending looked glum, and had nothing to say as they left the meeting.

Argentine delegates denied that they had received fresh instructions from Buenos Aires as a result of Conally's remarks.

New Time Law

What about state daylight saving laws and municipal daylight ordinances?

On Year-Round Basis

That's your problem. The federal government has moved up standard time one hour. If you want still another hour, you can have it—but the railroads and radio hope you don't. Presumably, most local and state daylight provisions will be repealed, since the new time accomplishes the same thing on a year-round basis.

Will the present time zones remain the same?

Yes, but the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has the duty of fixing the zone limits, is anticipating some requests for alterations.

By what authority is time fixed? It comes under the weights and measures clauses of the constitution.

Authorize Boost In Price of Gas

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (P)—A three tenths of a cent gallon increase on all grades of gasoline sold in fifteen eastern and southern states was approved today by the Office of Price Administration.

The increase, which will be permitted on all sales, including tank wagons, service stations, and other retail outlets, was in accord with assurances given the oil industry last fall by price administrator Leon Henderson and Petroleum Coordinator Harold Ickes.

At that time the oil companies were told that they would be reimbursed for additional transportation expenses incurred in efforts to relieve the petroleum shortage on the east coast by using tank cars and other high cost methods in place of tankers.

States affected by the increase included Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Asks Total Mobilization

"That means the mobilization of every available man, woman, dollar and thing—every plant, tool, machine, and bit of material to contribute to our total war effort. Literally, our military strength will depend upon what we, the people, can do without."

Here are some of the production goals and forecasts outlined in the report covering the period from the fall of France to Pearl Harbor:

1—Nearly three times as many weapons and supplies of war will be produced this year as in the last eighteen months. (Actual figures were withheld.)

2—Production of planes and tanks this year will equal that of Hitler in all the years before 1939 "when he was preparing to conquer the world," and "we are already on our way to outbuilding the world."

U. S. Output Tripled

3—Output of tanks and other combat vehicles is now more than three times as large as a year ago; guns of all types almost five times as large.

4—Army plane production not only has been stepped up to a point where, with Britain's, it will soon exceed that of the combined Axis, but the American army now has four types of combat planes "better than anything yet produced abroad, so far as is known."

5—The army has undergone a six-fold expansion in manpower and has made "remarkable progress toward its thirty-two fold expansion in munitions."

6—When Japan struck in Hawaii, the navy had seventeen battleships built and fifteen building; seven aircraft carriers built and eleven building; thirty-seven cruisers built and fifty-four building; 171 destroyers built and 193 building; 113 submarines built and seventy-three building.

7—A total of 2,000 planes have been added to navy's strength, and under construction at the end of 1941 were ninety-six naval auxiliaries, 243 mine craft, 225 patrol boats and other floating equipment.

8—Contracts have been let for 999 of the 2,000 merchant ship program, with 1,800 expected to be finished by the end of 1943. Two ships a day will soon be turned out and 350,000 men will be working at this task when the program gets into full swing. Crews must be found for about 800 ships, so 25,000 seamen and 6,000 officers are to be trained for this service.

Amy Porter Points Out "Good Things" That Grow Out of the World Struggle

By AMY PORTER

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (P)—"One good thing this war may do for us is . . ."

How many times have you heard this reasonably cheerful preface to some statement?

Multipled, the "one good thing" promises to form quite a sizable silver lining.

Child care, for instance. Mrs. Charles Bosanquet, who worked with London children during air raids and is working here now for the Save the Children Federation, says:

Children Benefit

"America, no doubt, will reap the same benefits England has reaped from its vigorous nation-wide effort to take good care of children. Under the stimulus of war, we in England established health centers, day nurseries—all the things we'd need and had been too lazy to attend to in time of peace."

"I'm sure our improved provisions for children—and you know the government itself has assumed responsibility—will carry over into the post-war years."

Likewise housing. Donald K. Vanman, priorities examiner with the Division of Defense Housing Coordination, says dwellings for war-time workers are being constructed with an eye to permanence.

"We're guarding against the possibility that boom-towns with their defense housing projects may become 'ghost-towns' after the war," said Vanman. "Defense industries are laying plans for their conversion into peace industries, so that populations will not have to shift again. In northern New Jersey and in the Buffalo area our housing plans are carefully integrated with probable post-war needs."

Bright Side for Women

For career women, there's a bright side to war, though it embarrasses them somewhat to admit the obvious—that they stand to profit at the expense of men who must give up jobs to go fight.

New skills, new opportunities in industry, business and the professions are some of the benefits they may expect, according to Mrs. Eunice Harrison, national education chairman of the Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

But, she added, "when the war ends I hope and believe that women will not try to keep men out of the kind of employment they enjoyed before Pearl Harbor."

National health should be improved for more than the duration, if we carry out half our good resolutions.

Dr. Leone Baumgartner of the New York City department of health, commented, "people are receptive now to health programs, where before good advice went in one ear and out the other."

As for "war psychology" about which so many gloomy words have been spoken, Dr. Otto Klineberg, Columbia University psychologist, predicts, "war won't be an unmixed evil psychologically. Already I see signs that prejudices against minorities are on the wane. As we fight for democracy, we give more thought to what democracy means."

Finally, our birth rate is on the increase, and that, say eugenicists, is a fine thing.

Bill of Rights Is Topic Of Radio Forum Sunday

America's Bill of Rights will be the topic of discussion for the Town Meeting of the Air broadcast Sunday. It was announced yesterday by J. Henry Holzhut, president of the Club of Human Relations, which sponsors the weekly program.

Speakers will include the Rev. W. Joyce Russell, assistant pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church; Fred Puderbaugh, attorney; and Capt. Richard P. Shireman of the Maryland State Guard.

Because of a ban by the office of Censorship on telephoned questions, all queries must be submitted in writing in advance. They may be mailed to Station WTBO over which the program will be broadcast at 5 p. m. Sunday.

St. Patrick's Church To Sponsor Red Cross Collection on Sunday

Envelopes will be distributed at all the Masses Sunday, January 25, in St. Patrick's Catholic church, North Centre street, for the war fund campaign of Allegheny county chapter of the Red Cross, and will be collected at the door by students of Catholic Girls' Central high school, dressed in Red Cross veils and arm bands.

Those who do not care to place their contribution in an envelope may deposit their offering in a basket at the door.

The collection at St. Patrick's is one week in advance of "Red Cross Sunday," February 1, when other churches throughout the county will participate.

St. Joseph's church, of Midland, obtained $100 for the Red Cross in a collection taken up last Sunday.

Driver Is Fined $1

James Gilbert Easton, of Long, was fined $1 and costs yesterday in trial magistrates' court on a charge of reckless driving preferred by Sgt. John H. Doud, state police. Easton was arrested on Route 40.

Directors To Meet

The quarterly meeting of the board of directors of the Keating Memorial Day Nursery will be held Wednesday, January 28, at 4 p. m., at the nursery, 212 Baltimore avenue.

Advanced First Aid Class Will Begin February 2 Here

The class in advanced first aid which was scheduled to start Monday night has been postponed until February 2 due to the large number of first aid classes now in progress. It was announced last night by Kate G. Perry, instructor.

The advanced class is being given for all those who have completed the standard advanced first aid instructor's courses within the last three years. It will be taught in the city hall auditorium.

Lower Trade Barriers

Asked about lowering of the trade barriers, the secretary pointed out that such a plan was being worked out with Canada and, in the case of Latin America, it was nation for appropriate authorities to explore broader areas in the same connection.

Morgenstern said the trade money might be a brand new currency which wouldn't belong to any one country but would be issued by an international commission.

He doubted whether the currency idea would have any effect on the use of native money within a country.

The secretary said the new example he could find to the use of the trade dollar which the United States had between 1873 and 1897. It was substantially the same as the ordinary silver dollar and was designed to facilitate trade with the orient.

U. S. Must Dominate Pacific if It Would Remain First-Class Power, Says Manila Newspaper Publisher

By WILLIAM A. RUTLEDGE III
Central Press Correspondent

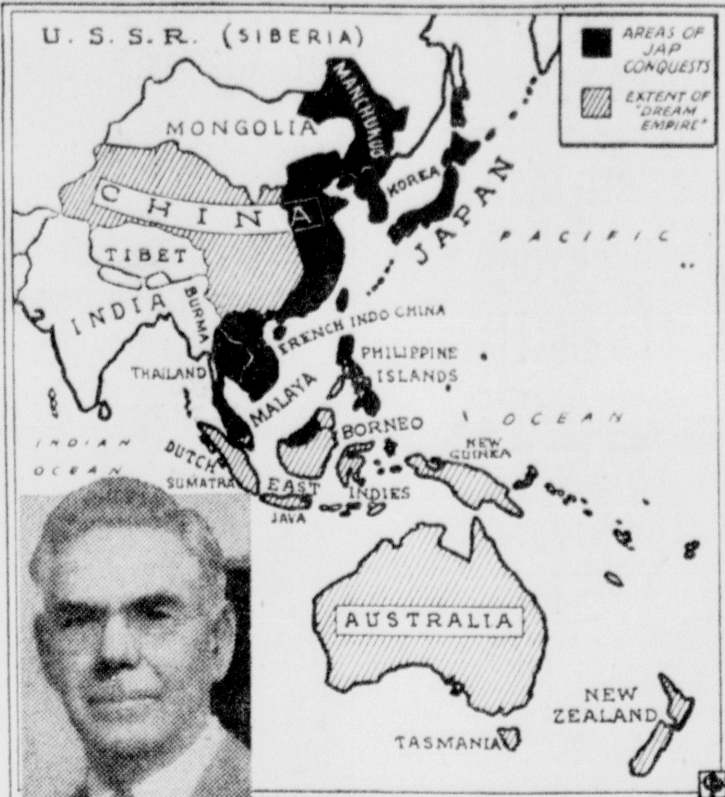

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 22.—The magnificent stand of General Douglas MacArthur and his troops in the Philippine theater of the Far Eastern conflict acted as an alarm clock which is arousing the American people to a comprehensive realization of the vital importance of our domination of the Pacific.

The rationing of automobile tires and tubes is but one indication of the part the Far East plays in the way of life to which Americans have become accustomed, declared Carson Taylor, founder and for 42 years the publisher of the Philippine's leading newspaper, the Manila Daily Bulletin, in an exclusive interview here.

Raw materials from this section of the globe are essentials, not only in the everyday life of the nation's citizens, but also in the maintenance of the United States as a first-class power of the world. The Philippines, Taylor pointed out, are the primary sources of hemp and chromium.

Hemp may seem to be a rather ordinary product, but, he emphasized, every ocean-going boat needs tons of hemp, the smallest ships requiring three and one-half tons. The Far East supplies 90 per cent of the world's rubber and about 65 per cent of the world's tin, all of the world's quinine, and many other products.

"New Order in Asia"
War with Japan, Taylor asserted, was the only possible means of

Carson Taylor

Japan's "dream" empire

halting her "New Order in Asia" program, laid down by Prince Tanaka in 1927, and which called for Japanese conquest and control of China, Indo-China, Malaya, Borneo, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand.

President Roosevelt realized the danger and after his re-election in 1936 was ready to deal with the situation, Taylor recounted. MacArthur, then retired, told our president that he was convinced that the Philippines could be defended, the supposition at that time being that the Japanese would strike a single blow at the archipelago. MacArthur became military adviser to President Manuel Quezon of the Philippines.

Before the end of that year MacArthur had mapped out a 10-year program which would have placed the Philippines in a position to defeat any invasion attempt. When war broke out, the brilliant United States general was half way through its program.

Planes Not Assembled
The spectacular opening of the war was perfectly timed to the detriment of the islands. The rich plantations north of Manila and south of Lingayen bay were going through their annual dry period. All the available airdromes were exposed fields. Work had begun on underground airdromes but was far from completed. A $50,000,000 improvement program had just been started at Cavite bay. Extensive fortification of Guam island had been undertaken. All too late.

Most importance must be given to the fact that American air strength would have been sufficient to defend the islands, Taylor opined, if the war had come a month later. Thousands of planes from southern California lay in crates in tiered rows at Nichols field and in warehouses at the harbor. A mighty armada of troop ships and plane carriers was en route to Manila on the Sunday morning of Dec. 7 with the men to assemble these planes and fly them.

"It is my candid opinion," Taylor said, "that because of this enormous initial advantage seized by the Japs the war raging in the Far East will not terminate before two years and possibly not until 1947."

Tokio predicts that Japan will win dominance of the Pacific and reduce the United States to a fifth-class power, Taylor said, adding:

"America is not yet fully awake to deny them the right to own property but that was circumvented since our right place as master of the Pacific, not on the basis of aggression and ruthless plundering but under the good neighbor policy which is so characteristic of this nation."

In the Philippines, Taylor asserted, Japan would gain an area of greater value than the mother country. A larger area of the Philippines is productive than in Japan proper. The resources of the archipelago far exceed those of Nippon itself.

Triumph of the Japs, as every native of the Philippines knows, will mean the extinction of the Filipino as a race. The Japanese will overrun the islands, and if the United States abandoned its possessions, would soon exterminate the Filipino people.

Jap Infiltration
For 30 years the Japs have been aggressively and systematically filtering into the islands. Laws were enacted to curb "foreigners" and war to arrange for the shipment of a year's supply of paper stock. This stock had arrived at his plant before the outbreak of the war. His plant was valued at nearly a half million dollars.

Yuhoodi Club Plans Dance For Benefit of Red Cross

Event Will Be Held at the Clary Club Feb. 20; Committee Is Named

Two hundred invitations will be issued for the charity dance to be held at the Clary Club February 10 by the Yuhoodi club for the benefit of the Red Cross. Dancing will be from 9 to 1 o'clock with the Society Ramblers playing.

Final plans for the event were made at a meeting Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Sarah Conner, 222 Fulton street. Mrs. Louise Moyer is chairman of the committee on arrangements and will be assisted by Mrs. Sarah Conner, Mrs. Masie Thompson and Mrs. Hazel Ryan.

Names for secret sisters were distributed and club pins were discussed. Mrs. Ann Greene resigned as treasurer and Mrs. Dorothy DuVall was elected to fill the vacancy. Following the meeting cards were played with Mrs. Moyer, Mrs. Thompson and Mrs. Evelyn Judy winning prizes.

DON'T SAY WHO DID IT

EVERY BOY remembers stories told by his father about mischievous pranks committed by certain members of his class when he himself was at school. When his dad doesn't give the name of the perpetrator, the boy always has his own ideas as to who really was the culprit. It is just as well for bridge players to observe the same tactics in telling about some terrible contracts they got into and made, by the grace of dumb luck. Some of these can be related better in the third than the first person as you are not then hampered by feeling like a confessor—or a fool.

Here was South in a contract which should be smeared, if probabilities had anything to do with the case. The club A was a sure winner against him. Five diamonds were out, including the Q and J. The spade K was held by the opposition. All that South had to do to make the contract was to lead the two diamond honors and cash the spade K.

West settled one of these problems without any delay by making the natural lead of his spade 5, but putting his K on the 9 and 10. A winning. Seeing that there was no kind of a finesse against the diamond honors and that they must be dropped, the declarer cashed the A and K of that suit, and his dreams were fulfilled—the dreams.

There was nothing to do then but lead a club and let the Q lose to the A. That built up a succession of 12 tricks for him—three in spades, three in hearts, five in diamonds and the twelfth in clubs.

When that hand was narrated, illustrated by a careful transcribing of it on a slip of paper, the regular spoke of it as a crazy contract he saw made. But there was a queer note in his voice. So he asked who was South. "None of your business," he replied.

Joseph E. Davies are of inestimable value.

One of the chief fears has been lest Soviet Russia, like France, Norway, the Netherlands and nearly every other country attacked by the Axis, might under stress split along internal lines. To date there has been no evidence that such a fifth column movement has been active in Russia, but we now have an explanation as to why this is so, and why one is not likely to develop in future.

No country in the world would appear to be so susceptible to fifth column activity as the Soviet Union with its immense minorities—the Russians themselves form only about 60 per cent of the population—and its potential dissatisfaction due to revolution, confiscation of property, enforced collectivization of agriculture, anti-religious crusades and similar radical measures which accompanied the Soviet seizure of power.

Armed Resistance

That such dissatisfaction has been very real was clearly indicated within the past decade by the passive and armed resistance to collectivization in the years 1931-32 which cost the lives of some three or four million resisters and included the suicide of a Communist minister of education in the Ukraine before it was subdued; the Ukrainian trials of 1933 when the prosecution of professors indicated widespread insurrection among the intellectual leaders of 30,000,000 Ukrainians; the murder of Stalin's close friend, Kirov, in 1934; the trials of the

"Old Bolshevik" leaders in 1937 and 1938, including such outstanding figures as Radek and Bukharin; and finally the purge of the cream of the army officers in the same year, to the accompaniment of rumors of internecine strife between the GPU and the regular army.

In 1938 there were rumors of widespread industrial sabotage by factory managers not unlike that which was later to destroy France's aviation industry, ending with the trial and conviction of a number of the accused saboteurs.

The years from 1933 to 1938 were thus punctuated by a series of important trials, apparently unrelated, whose nature at the time was impossible to interpret except that they were generally considered evidence of imminent collapse and provided a further argument for refusal by the men of Munich to cooperate with Russia in an attempt to maintain peace in Europe by combined force. By retrospect, however, they fall into a single pattern and take on new meaning.

Fantasies True!

Perhaps most remarkable of all is the fact that the accusations and the confessions of these trials, brushed aside by outsiders as pure fiction, too incredible for any serious consideration, can now be accepted as fundamentally true. This is not because new facts have emerged from Russia itself but because the plans and the acts confessed are such as have become a commonplace in the weird world of reality outside Russia.

Essentially the trials were directed against potential or real fifth columns—dissatisfied groups whom it was the aim of Nazi intrigue to use as tools for undermining the Russian government if not for delivering it, bound hand and foot, into the hands of Hitler. The groups involved were not unlike those that made up the fifth columns of France and her smaller neighbors. What was dissimilar was that in Russia the fifth columns were stifled in infancy, and with a lack of compunction later to be envied by the legitimate governments of less hard-boiled lands.

In all, four distinct fifth columns were ruthlessly rooted out. One consisted of Ukrainian intellectuals, weak in themselves but urged on by agitators from Berlin and made dangerous by the dislike of the individualistic Ukrainian farmers for the collective farm system, which in Russia proper was more readily accepted because farming there always has been on a community basis.

The second group, the "Old Bolsheviks," were revolutionists of long standing who had been willing to sink their differences in order to strike a common blow at the bourgeoisie but who now, as the revolutionary crisis subsided, were prepared for reasons of personal ambition or theoretical differences to renew the internal warfare of pre-revolutionary days, when the chief Communist activity had consisted of bitter quarrels among narrow factions.

A third was that headed by Field Marshal Tukhachevsky, generally considered the most brilliant strategist in the Red army, whose reasoning is obscure but who may have believed Russia had more to gain than to lose by an alliance with the powerful military machine of Germany. His plot was said by Russians to have been revealed to his mistress a German spy, whose information was passed on to Russia.

in a diabolical piece of double-crossing intended to deprive the Red army of its best leadership. There is an equal likelihood that the Russians in giving out this story were merely indulging in sardonic humor at the expense of the Gestapo.

The last of the fifth columns was made up of engineers and factory managers, some of them kept on from Tsarist times, others sympathetic with the "Old Bolsheviks," who saw an opportunity by calculated mismanagement to discredit the regime and replace it with themselves. The essential point is that after the trials there was no fifth column left alive to greet Hitler, and there is none now to block Russia's continued resistance to Hitler and his satellites side by side with the United States.

Russians Also Use Motorized Sleds against Fleeing Nazis

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Jan. 22 (P)—German armies floundering back along Napoleon's road troops that skinned the snow-drifts on fast, propeller-driven sleds and struck fiercely at their flanks.

Riding waist-deep snow in front of roaring plane engines, the far-flung Russian vanguards were reported to have intercepted the Germans west of the Napoleonic battlefields of Borodino and, with their light arms, to have spread terror and confusion along the enemy's difficult line of communication.

The old Borodino battlefield lies a dozen miles west of Moscow, which was the high point of the Germans' main frontal salient aimed at Moscow. The Germans were in retreat toward Vyazma, about sixty miles miles farther west.

Most Likely Refuge

Vyazma was regarded as the next likely German refuge from the Russian central front offensive as well as from the bitterest week of Russia's winter so far. Forty degrees (Fahrenheit) below zero has been the ordinary temperature at the front this week.

London sources held that flank harassments and steady frontal pressure west of Moscow would fulfill the immediate strategy of the Red Army command since, with the Germans engaged in straightening their receding "winter line" now between Kirov and Rzhev, the invaders' flight would be speedy, with or without continuing a headlong attack.

(For the next moments developments in the Russian onslaught, London observers looked to the northern and southern fronts.)

Dispatches reaching Moscow from the northern and southern wings of the 2,000-mile battlefront indicated that the offensive again was rolling forward in the Leningrad and Kharkov regions.

The Moscow radio said tonight that Russians in the Ore-Kursk-Kharkov zone had recaptured 44 towns and villages in the past few days. Other dispatches acknowledged German counter-attacks in some sections.

Kill 1,000 Germans

With Red aviation support, infantrymen were said to have slain 1,000 Germans in a single village on the southern front.

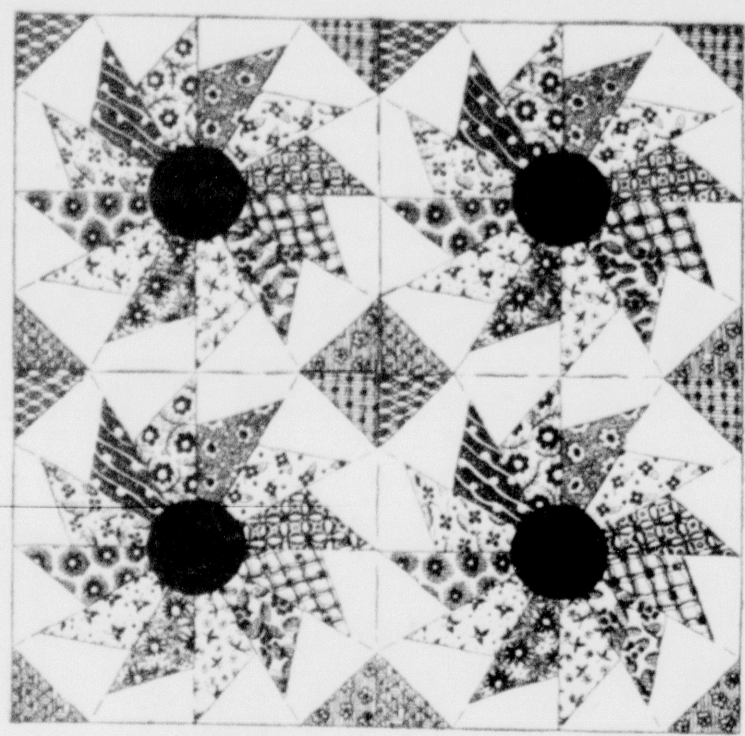

On the northern front, the infantrymen backed up by artillery forced the Germans out of four villages in the last three days. Another dispatch said, Pravda reported that at Volkovo and Volkovo in the Leningrad region, the Germans were bringing in worn-out detachments from other fronts to help slow the Russians.

Gable To Return To Work in Movies

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22 (P)—Clark Gable will return to movie work as soon as he has recovered from the shock of the airplane crash death of his wife, Carole Lombard. M-G-M studio said today.

"We are leaving it to Clark to tell us when he is ready to resume work," a movie official said. Gable started a new picture, "Somewhere I'll Find You," the day before Miss Lombard and twenty-one others were dashed to death high on a Nevada mountain. He was not needed last Friday, the day of the crash, and at Saturday production was suspended indefinitely.

RAF Announces New Airdrome Defense Units

Will Be Used To Aid British Army and Pave Way for Offense

By E. C. DANIEL, Jr.

LONDON, Jan. 22 (P)—The RAF's new airdrome defense units were formed to relieve the British army of that job and permit it to organize "the greatest possible striking force for offensive operations on the continent," Sir Archibald Sinclair, the air minister, told Commons today.

Speaking at the opening of debate as to the effectiveness of his new airdrome defense plan—a debate in which the death penalty was suggested for complacent ministers—Sir Archibald declared that it would be "second to none."

Defense Redoubled

He was faced, however, with ridicule of the existing defenses, with stories of how British airdromes had been "invaded" by hunters, members of Parliament and small boys.

After he had described the organization of his RAF defense regiments (the term in British usage involves a variable number of battalions) one member declared that a group of his friends was willing to wager $200 that they could capture the neighboring airdrome, administration buildings and all.

Defending the minister, Captain Harold Balfour, undersecretary for air, observed:

"Snoopers will be snooping at their own risk in future."

One critic in RAF blue, Flight Lieutenant Henry Victor Raikes, complained of sloppiness in preparations to meet a German invasion "that may come in March," and went on:

"If there is one new penalty that might be created it should be the death penalty for complacency on the part of any minister."

Sir Archibald explained that responsibility for ground defense of air bases remained with the army, but that the royal air force had assumed actual command under army directions of the forces stationed on such fields.

Power Rationing May Prevent Use Of Radio in Homes

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (P)—The slipped stay-at-homes who listen to the radio far into the night and their more active brethren who frequent the hot-spots soon may feel the sting of government rationing and learn that "burning the midnight oil" is more than an old saying.

The Federal Power Commission put Congress on notice today that possibly before the end of this year the nation may face a shortage of electricity acute enough to require rationing that might mean "a great deal more than simply the elimination of neon signs or other essentially luxury uses."

In short, Commission Chairman Leland Olds intimated, during hearings on the independent offices appropriation bill sent to the House floor today, that civilian blackouts may become a matter of routine regardless of how far from our shores enemy bombers are kept.

Many Japanese Raids

The Dutch put the lush oil fields and refineries of Balikpapan to torch today and sardonically informed the Japanese they "might just as well forget about their plans" for invading that East Borneo section.

An official announcement said both wells and plants at Balikpapan had been utterly destroyed "in view of the clearly distinguished Japanese intention to attack Balikpapan in order to get hold of important oil wells."

Between them, Tarakan and Balikpapan had an oil output of 1,680,377 tons a year — some of it of such high gravity that it could be used in warships with little refining.

U. S. Planes in Action

Today's Dutch communiqué described the latest enemy air activity against the East Indies archipelago as slight, and another official announcement disclosed that United States flying fortresses, newly arrived in the N.E.I., already have been in important action.

These great planes were the ones which sank a Japanese cruiser and fired a 10,000-ton tanker Monday 100 miles south of the Philippine island of Jolo, the announcement said. (A previous Washington communiqué had identified the planes merely as "six American army bombers.")

Germans Forced Back in Surprise Attack in Desert

Rommel's Forces Dealt Severe Blow in Furious Sandstorm

CAIRO, Jan. 22 (P)—The German desert army has been turned back after a sudden, ten-mile thrust in the Red mist of a furious sandstorm, reports from the Gulf of Sirte battleground said tonight.

This sudden lashing out by the army of General Erwin Rommel, after it had been pursued more than 300 miles across Libya, was described by the British middle-east command as a "reconnaissance in force."

Three strong columns supported by most of the German "remaining" tanks made the penetration in fighting lasting all of yesterday, but at nightfall were forced to turn back by strong resistance from the British Eighth army British officers considered it to be a testing of British strength and an attempt to prevent the British from establishing artillery positions preparatory to a full-scale attack.

The Germans attacked in the worst weather the desert has seen in a decade; weather which had slowed the British advance, kept many British planes grounded and enabled Rommel to lay minefields to protect his positions. The area from which he struck is, incidentally, about the same from which the Germans last April began their drive which rolled back General Archibald P. Wavell's depleted forces all the way to the Egyptian frontier.

Not in the Tradition

"Mother wasn't in the entertainment business," says Joan, "and I wasn't brought up in a trunk. I had a sheltered home, went to college, had all the things a girl wants. But I wanted a career too."

Gus, sympathetic to the home life idea, gave her a job playing auditions, but merely said "How interesting" when Joan told him she could sing. "Only Aunt Dorothy was in cahoots," Joan says. "She gave me lessons on the sly."

That takes us right back to showmanship. You need that ingredient to be the only girl vocalist under television contract with CBS, or to share with Barry Wood the singing chores on the Hit Parade. Joan has it.

Even U. S. Mint Can't Beat War Priorities

DENVER, Jan. 22 (P)—Even the mint can't beat war priorities, Mrs. Nellie Taylor Ross, director of the mint, disclosed today.

On an inspection visit to the Denver mint, working twenty-four hours a day making coins, Mrs. Ross related that four electric furnaces about to be delivered to the Denver mint were taken over by the navy.

"If it's a question of turning out coins or ships, of course we want the navy to have the furnaces," she commented.

Much "Undisclosed" In Japanese Report

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 22 (P)—The Tokyo radio broadcast this report today on what it described as the progress of the Japanese campaign on the Batam peninsula of Luzon Island.

"Our forces are advancing to an undisclosed position, after crossing an undisclosed river. This was accomplished by a great undisclosed division."

The CBS listening post picked up the broadcast.

She Didn't Mind Her Parents-- But Joan Is Doin' All Right

By RAY PEACOCK
AP Feature Service Writer

NEW YORK—The difference between Joan Edwards and other little girls who can sing maybe just as well is showmanship.

Some skeptic is sure to sneer: "Izzatso? How about her family connections?"

All right. So Joan Edwards is the niece of Gus Edwards, the talent discoverer. Also the niece of Leo Edwards, the song writer, and Dorothy Edwards, vocal teacher at Carnegie Institute. Also the daughter of Ben Edwards, the song plugger.

But it so happens that Joan's parents objected to a career, not because of the usual fears and uncertainties, but because they felt it was a lonely life.

Not in the Tradition

"Mother wasn't in the entertainment business," says Joan, "and I wasn't brought up in a trunk. I had a sheltered home, went to college, had all the things a girl wants. But I wanted a career too."

Gus, sympathetic to the home life idea, gave her a job playing auditions, but merely said "How interesting" when Joan told him she could sing. "Only Aunt Dorothy was in cahoots," Joan says. "She gave me lessons on the sly."

That takes us right back to showmanship. You need that ingredient to be the only girl vocalist under television contract with CBS, or to share with Barry Wood the singing chores on the Hit Parade. Joan has it.

Easy on the Eyes

The showmanship is evident before Joan, her brown eyes confident, sings a single note. Her trim figure, needing no flattery, loses none from her eye-catching gown. Her brown hair "burnt toast" is her color description. Is at advantage in a bang-and-curl style. Five feet five, slim and erect, she is alive with the rhythm and beat of the music. In a word, strictly "Ahi!"

Joan is a Jull-of-all tunes in this era of specialized and type singing. Hot, sweet or blue, loud or intimate, she sings any style—valuable versatility on a program like the Hit Parade.

Level-headed and a good business woman, Joan did follow some of her family's advice.

"When I went ahead with my plans, they told me not to try to come out with a splash, because if I did and failed, I would be marked for life. So while I was going to college I worked in small radio stations."

"At first I played the piano. Then I started humming along with the music. The humming turned to singing, and for the last year or so I haven't played at all except for television."

She had two early ambitions—to work for Rudy Vallee and Paul Whiteman. She was 19 when she finished Hunter college in 1937, her first job was with Vallee, old talent discoverer himself. A with Whiteman came next, and Whiteman she gives credit for developing her voice and poise, and ability to select the right songs.

Joan and her brother, Walter, senior at New York University, written a song, "And So It Ends" already on records.

"Wouldn't it be something," Joan, "if I sang a hit song I myself?"

Heartbreaking Is Sometimes Done By Innocent Boy

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

It isn't always the professional heart-breaker who, after a girl has broken, has fallen in love with him, turns his head away and with seeming callousness devotes his attention to something or somebody else.

Sometimes it is an utterly well-meaning and innocent boy who, growing little of girls or love engagements, gets himself into a rap and causes a girl serious unhappiness without the slightest idea of what he has been about.

Private Jim L. seems to be a youth of this description. Jim hadn't written me. He doesn't know there's anything to write about. It's the girl at home Doris, who has told me the story and I will give you her version of it. You'll feel impatient with her, perhaps, but remember that love is a powerful force and that it has been in its grip.

"Ten months ago," Doris writes from the small town where she lives, "Jim had to go to camp. He is an orphan whose home was with his uncle and aunt. Jim hadn't ever really dated me much, but that wasn't my fault for I have always thought him the grandest boy I know.

Puppy a Gift
Some weeks before he left somebody gave him a setter puppy. He loved this dog so much that he couldn't bear to give it to anybody else. His uncle and aunt hate dogs, so he couldn't leave it there. Plenty of boys would have been glad to keep it for him, but Jim was afraid of losing the dog's affection.

"This seemed a chance for me. I said I'd keep the puppy, and give it up again the minute he returned. To tell the truth, I don't like dogs much myself, but I did like doing something for Jim.

"Well, Jim accepted my offer and I've taken care of the dog, 'Butch,' ever since. I've fussed with his food and have seen that he had enough, but it's an affection I can't reciprocate.

He grows faster than any dog I ever heard of. He is now enormous. He's violently affectionate, too, especially when I'm wearing my good clothes, to spend all his time with him. He thought Butch remembered him. He said the days he spent playing with Butch and teaching him tricks were the happiest he'd ever known.

In Woods All Day
so that you'd notice it. Jim told me I'd done a good job with Butch but he seemed to think I was more than repaid by the fun of having Butch around. The last evening Jim was in town, he motored me over to a nearby town for dinner and we danced a little. But he had been out in the woods all day with Butch since early morning, and so about ten o'clock he confessed he was sleepy and we went home.

"Meanwhile, I'm so in love with that boy that I would die for him. But what can I do? That terrible dog, instead of bringing us together as I hoped, has separated us more than ever. Dear Miss Fairfax, can you suggest anything?"

Doris has only two courses. One is to try to forget Jim, which is what I really advise; the other is to gamble on the possibility that sooner or later she can still, through Butch, secure Jim's attention. But this seems very doubtful. What it boils down to is that a girl runs a great risk in going more than half way in the matter of love unless, at the same time she has the art of a siren. And this, I am afraid, poor Doris lacks.

Forgetting Her Soldier Boy
Dear Miss Fairfax:
My girl and I went through high school together. Everyone knew we were in love and would marry as soon as I could support her properly. My father has a county bank and is in easy circumstances, but of course I couldn't bring the girl home to live with my family.

I worked in the bank and was saving all I could. Then the Draft came. Now I don't know what the end will be. The night before I left for camp my girl begged me to marry her. She took our parting terribly hard, but I did not think it would be fair to marry her when everything was so uncertain.

After I was in camp three months her letters grew fewer. Then I heard she had taken up with a man who belongs to the snooty country club and was turned down by the Draft for physical disability. I now hear rumors that he and my girl are likely to become engaged, though she has never definitely broken off with me.

I'm so desperately unhappy about losing faith in her that I'd do anything that would wind up the torment of no longer believing in the dearest thing on earth to me.

SOLDIER BOY

It's cold comfort to tell you that a girl who could forget so quickly and easily wouldn't make a good wife for any man. If you married her you would have been probably deliciously happy for a year or so.

Then she'd look about for newer thrills.

It's the cruelest thing in life to go on when one's faith in human nature has been wrecked. But it has to be gone through with, and time heals. You will meet someone who is more worthy of your constancy and love. Meanwhile please don't think me cynical if I remind you that the best way to forget inconstancy is to find someone attractive near at hand.

Boosting Morale Termed Defense Duty of Parents

Mothers and Fathers Should Write Cheerful- ly to Sons in Army

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

Now that our nation has been attacked, we can be sure that no letters will go to fathers, sons and other relatives in the services suggesting that they should not be there. America is as one man and we parents are all patriots. We want our nation saved and we are proud to have our loved ones share in its saving. Many mothers and most disabled and over-aged fathers wish they could march beside their sons and help defend our country.

Those of us who are not eligible for the armed forces will do our bit for defense in every other way we can. One of the ways in which every parent and grandparent, every wife, other relative or sweetheart can help is to boost the morale of our soldiers and sailors.

Courageous Attitude

We can do much of this through our healthy and courageous attitude toward them as they leave for the front. We can do it even months and years before they are eligible to go. We can do it through our letters to them. When we and our children write the man in the service it will be with an air of straightforward courage.

We won't tell him of our fears and anxieties about him. We won't tell him that a hole his going left in our hearts nor how we miss him. We won't be so selfish. There will be no weeping in our words, no tears between our lines. We will write of the everyday experiences we have had as we would if he had gone off for a visit of a few weeks. We will write interesting, newsy letters. We will also send him news clippings, or have the local daily or weekly paper sent regularly to him.

Cheerful Letters

We will not write him of our aches and pains, our worries, sorrows and disappointments. Rather we will write about all the cheerful and funny things we can think of. If such won't come from our heads we will borrow from the heads of others. As we read, let us make note or slip some of the funny things to enclose with the letter.

Let the letter recall some of the funny things we and the son, husband, relative or other loved one experienced together and, never once infer that we are not sure we will have equally pleasant times again.

Without seeming to lecture him, let us urge him to go to religious services regularly.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

"TAY SAID you liked gardenias," said Neil, holding out a box as Molla came down the stairs. She stopped short and groaned. "You shouldn't have given yourself away like that. You should have let me believe the flowers were your idea."

"Oh, they were," he assured her hastily. "I just asked Tay what kind you preferred."

"Well, that's better," she smiled. "Ummmm, they smell wonderful. Here, help me pin them on my coat."

His strong fingers maneuvered just a little clumsily as he struggled with the pin.

"Don't frown so," Molla told him. "Building a bridge is a much bigger job."

"But a much less complicated one," he assured her, as they walked down the steps toward his car.

"Tay let me use his car tonight so I'd have a way of getting home easily. You ought to feel at home in it."

"It's nice," she said non-committally, poking at an occasional snowflake with her gloved finger. "I love the snow, don't you?"

"I like it plenty. Always have. Tay doesn't, though. If he had his way he'd abolish winter as unconstitutional."

She laughed for a second as the car got in motion, then another expression flitted over her face.

"I'm very fond of Tay," she said, "but must we make him the topic of conversation all night? As long as—well, as long as you are my escort for the evening, why not talk about you?"

He looked at her quickly, but he couldn't begin to guess what she meant.

"I would be the least interesting of any seven topics of conversation we could pick, so that ends that."

"Too bad the other two tickets went to waste."

"Oh, I'm not sorry," he said quickly. "This is a whole lot better than if I'd had to take out that Mc Bride person Tay shoved onto me."

"You mean I'm the lesser of two evils?"

"Hey, now, wait a minute," he said, throwing her a quick sideways glance. "I don't mean anything of the kind. You led me right up to that one and shoved me over the brink."

She threw back her head and laughed.

hesitancy as the crowds streamed past them.

"Well, now what?" he asked. "Frankly, my tastes run a little more to the simple. You don't want to go dancing anywhere, do you?"

"You sound rather anxious about it, but don't worry—I don't. Come," she said, grabbing his arm. "Let's just walk—anywhere; I don't care. I like to walk."

They cut across Forty-second street to Fifth avenue.

"Such beautiful shops, such beautiful things," Molla murmured. "Oh, it must be wonderful to be rich. Would you like to be rich some day?"

"Rich? Who, me? Nope, not me. It gives you too much to worry about. All I'm interested in is this." He waved a sweeping arm toward the magnificent Rockefeller Center. "Build. Create. There's no greater satisfaction on earth than building a Boulder dam, a gigantic skyscraper, a Panama canal."

Then you know you've DONE something. Get what I mean?"

Molla nodded.

"A girl's problem is so much less complicated," he continued. "Take yourself, for instance. You're young, beautiful, and all you've got to do is fall in love and get married, and the problem, such as it is, is solved."

"Very simple," Molla said. "Very. Of course, it isn't much of a problem finding and falling in love with the right man."

"Having difficulty?" he inquired casually.

Molla shook her head. "I don't think so."

Neil patted her arm. "Of course not. He's a swell guy. I like him plenty."

They had cut back to Broadway again and suddenly Molla stopped. "Look, doughnuts," she said, pointing to a window. "I love them. Let's have some with coffee."

"I figured we'd do it a little better than that," he grinned, "but it's okay with me."

They went inside the shop and sat at the counter. "Ummmm, delicious. If I were to write a book on what impressed me most in America I would have to include doughnuts."

"And I thought my tastes ran to the simple," he said.

"It's late," Molla said, looking at her watch a few minutes later. "And you've got a long ride ahead of you."

"This is one of the moments when I agree that wealth is a convenience," Neil remarked as they got out of the car in front of Molla's house. "Instead of driving 35 miles, all Tay would have to do is put up at one of his various clubs. "Well," he put out his hand, "goodnight. I hope I managed all right as a pinch-hitter."

"A pinch-hitter?"

"Sure. You know. Or maybe you don't. That's baseball for a substitute batter."

"Oh," she said, giving him her hand. "You mean a home base."

"Home run," you mean, but I doubt it," he murmured. "I'll settle for a single."

"I know more about baseball than you think I do. I saw some of it in England. And I insist you get a home run."

Tay came back to work Monday morning and marched right up to Molla.

"Good morning," she said. "How is your throat?"

"Fine, fine," Tay said. "Have run Saturday night?"

"Oh, very much. Neil thought he was a very poor pinch-hitter, but I told him he hit a home run."

"Oh, he did, hey? Why, that wolf!"

Enid Blair, sitting next to Molla, looked up with a raised eyebrow. "Look who's calling who a wolf."

Tay grinned at her. "Pipe down, Blair."

Enid leered at him. "And as long as we're talking baseball, I think I'll convince Molla she'd thrive on a change of pace."

Tay made a threatening backhanded motion toward her and walked into his office.

"You do and you're fired," he called back. Enid laughed.

"What's a change of pace?" Molla asked.

"I once went with a minor league pitcher from Wilkes-Barre. He didn't have much of it, so he didn't get far."

"Oh," said Molla vaguely. The telephone rang. "For you," Enid said.

It was Eddie Bryan. "Well, kid, you went over like a big-top tent. We saw those test pictures this morning and you looked like a million in government bonds, gilt edge and ready to be redeemed. They merely suggested you take a few speech lessons to sort of brush away that tiny little accent of yours, but I can convince them it adds a little more old-world charm."

"Hear this?" Eddie asked. Over the wire Molla could hear him slapping some paper. "There's a contract in my left hand and right above a dotted line there's a figure which mentions something about $100 a week to start. It's yours for the word."

Molla took a deep breath. "I'll tell you tomorrow."

Time Is a Good Test on Question Of Being in Love

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

The subjoined letter was received from a girl of 22. They met out West while both were seeking to regain their health. I have no way of knowing his point of view, but I quote from what she has to say.

"While in a western state for my health last year," she writes, "I met a man patient who was out there for the same reason. At first he didn't attract me at all, and I may have been rather distant at times. Yet he seemed to like me very much. He is 36 years old.

"As we were thrown together constantly, I learned to care very much for him and didn't hesitate to let him know my sentiments. And then he grew indifferent and seemed to lose much of his former fervid affection."

Man of Character

"He isn't the kind to lead a woman on but is really a man of character. Observing my growing attraction for him he seemed to withdraw. In fact, I was made so unhappy when he moved away from the ranch where we both stayed."

"He appeared reluctant to say goodbye, and I didn't hear from him for a month and then he just called up. When I reproached him for neglecting me, he charged me with being silly and said he would drop me entirely if I didn't take myself in hand. But the next time we met he kissed me as though no rift had occurred between us.

"He seems to be serious, doesn't often talk about himself. I'm fourteen years younger than he is, have better looking and congenial. Yet I cannot get this man out of my mind. I write him affectionate letters, but his are just like a letter one would get from any good friend, rather than a sweetheart."

Seems a Realist

It seems to me this man, being so much older than you are, is more of a realist, and distrusts love affairs which have their beginnings in health resorts between patients.

Time is the only test for such a case. You've always heard, no doubt, that propinquity is the most favorable aid to falling in love. At a health resort people have little to do, and naturally they take a keener interest in their fellow patients than they would if the concerns of life occupied their attention.

You may be genuinely in love with this man, but it would be well to let time prove or disprove this interest of yours.

Mineral Docket For January Is Set by Judge

"Alleged Keeping of Slot Machines" Cases Will Be Heard

KEYSER, W. Va., Jan. 22 — The docket for the January term of mineral county circuit court was set this morning by Judge Robert McV. Jones and members of the county bar association, with all criminal cases scheduled for trial Monday.

Of most interest locally were cases involving the alleged keeping and exhibiting of slot machines by residents at three Keyser clubs—Legion club, Veterans of Foreign Wars club and the Keyser Moose lodge. There are four indictments in the slot machine charge. They are against Ernest Mackley, James Patten and Mary Jenkins, of the Legion club; Charles Briley and Ernest Mackley, Legion club; Ralph Dade and Mark Wenner, Moose lodge; and Mosby Rogers, VFW club.

Referring to the slot machine cases, Judge Dade said from the bench that "The disposition of one of them will likely determine the disposition of the other three."

Court officials were of the opinion that the term would be a short one, as cases have been set for trial after Thursday, January 29.

The docket, as set today:

Monday, January 26, Rada Evans vs. J. K. Staggers, State vs. John W. House, State vs. Mackley, Porters and Jenkins, State vs. Dade and Wenner, State vs. Rogers, State vs. Briley and Mackley, State vs. Lyons, State vs. Lesley and Lesley vs. Swick.

Tuesday, January 27, Hobart Jones and Infant vs. Charles N. Turner, Janet T. Abern vs. Edward McKee, A. R. Hannis vs. Martin Watson, City of Keyser vs. George Eagle and J. B. Martin vs. George Weese.

Wednesday, January 28, Dunlop vs. Grand Rubber company vs. W. D. Harnsberger vs. Miller P. Harnsberger.

Thursday, January 29, William McDonald vs. W. J. Koelz, Second National Bank vs. Potomac Improvement company.

Mrs. Mary Fleek Dies

Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Fleek, 75, wife of Jacob Fleek, died at her home at the Fountain, near here, this morning after an illness of several years. Mrs. Fleek suffered a heart attack.

Mrs. Fleek was born in Mineral county, a daughter of the late Jackson and Mary Starks. She was a lifelong member of the United Brethren church.

Besides her husband she is survived by seven children, Mrs. Samuel Lee, Pinedo, Charles Fleek, at home, Mrs. Earl Biser and Harry and Hilley Fleek, the Fountain, Mrs. William Rogers, Keyser and Mrs. Mary Dayton, Cumberland; a sister, Mrs. Harry Pattenberger, Blaine.

Your Federal Income Tax No. 17 EARNED INCOME CREDIT

The law allows in computing the normal tax of an individual an earned income credit of ten per cent of the earned net income, but not in excess of ten per cent of the net income. "Earned income" is defined in the law as wages, salaries, professional fees, and other amounts received as compensation for personal services actually rendered. Where a taxpayer is engaged in a trade or business in which both personal services and capital are material income-producing factors, a reasonable allowance as compensation for personal services actually rendered by the taxpayer, not in excess of twenty per cent of his share of the net profits of such trade or business, is considered as earned income. "Earned net income" means the excess of the amount of the earned income over the sum of the "earned income deductions," which are the ordinary and necessary expenses properly chargeable against earned income. The entire amount of the taxpayer's net income up to and including $3,000, regardless of the source, is considered earned net income. In no case is the earned net income to be considered to be more than $14,000.

and a brother, John H. Urie, the Fountain. Seventeen grandchildren and seventeen great-grandchildren also survive.

Shown in "Pic"

Plan National Guard

At a meeting of veterans' organizations here last night V. O. Gallion and L. R. Hamilton were named to represent veterans and ex-service men of Keyser at a conference tomorrow in Charleston, where the formation of a West Virginia national guard will be discussed.

It was announced at last night's meeting that efforts were under way for the formation of a national guard in this state, built around ex-service men.

Gallion is a veteran of World War I and Hamilton of the Spanish-American war.

Have Dinner

Keyser McNeill chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, entertained with a dinner yesterday evening at the Glen Dining room, Mineral street, in observance of the birthdays of Generals Lee and Jackson.

"Save the Y"

The campaign, is a large exhibition of posters and slogans on display in the show windows of G. C. Murphy and Company, Baltimore street. By an arrangement with the manager, Ralph James, the posters were displayed to show the public that the young people of the city are interested in the campaign, and want to help keep the Y.M.C.A. for the city.

Deciding that the current drive for funds to save the "Y" was a subject on which the high school pupils would probably have pretty good original ideas, Principal V. M. Heisey of Fort Hill high school suggested it as a subject for posters for the Art class.

Some original and creditable posters were made up, indicating originality of ideas and considerable skill in execution.

Merchant Offers Prizes

Another downtown merchant noted the exhibit thought and effort many of the students put into this work and he offered modest cash prizes for the three best slogans contributed by students at each of the two public high schools.

Many of the slogans are good and the committee found it extremely difficult to decide which were best. The three judges, all members of the Save the "Y" committee, had to call in outside assistance to decide on the winners. Majority votes finally awarded the prizes as follows:

ALLEGANY—First—"You and I must Save the 'Y'"; Jay Beneman; second—"For Your Boy and Mine Save the 'Y'"; Tommy Jamison; and third—"Keep the 'Y' Wide Open"; Virginia Russ.

FORT HILL—First—"You and I can Save the 'Y'—Give"; Ralph Collins; second—"Save the 'Y' and Save our Youth"; Eugene Mayhew; and third—"Caretaker of Idle Minds"; Richard Keller.

Several variations of the "You and I" theme were received but the judges finally decided that the two listed above qualified as the best of the group.

Save the "Y" posters may be seen in Murphy's window during the remainder of the campaign, which is to close Tuesday night, January 27.

Trial of Drunken Driving Appeal Postponed Again

Two State Witnesses Fail To Appear for Howard W. Spiker Case

The trial of Howard W. Spiker, Cumberland real estate agent, on charges of drunken driving was postponed again yesterday in circuit court when two state witnesses, residents of Elk Garden, W. Va., failed to appear.

Spiker was arrested on the charge last August 8 and sentenced to a year in the House of Correction by Magistrate Roy S. Bowman, of Cresaptown. The stiff sentence was mandatory because it was Spiker's third conviction.

Set for October Term

The defendant noted an appeal through Clarence Shutter and Edward J. Ryan, attorneys, and the case was set for trial at the October term of circuit court. At that time, the trial was postponed until January on a doctor's certificate that Spiker was unable to appear.

The case was called for trial yesterday afternoon but was continued until the April term when it was discovered that two state witnesses were not on hand.

State's Attorney Morgan C. Harris told Associate Judge William A. Huster that the Elk Garden men had been "informally summoned" by West Virginia state troopers and asking that the case be postponed until April, stated that he would invoke the Uniform Witnesses act to insure the presence of the witnesses then.

Two Convictions Confirmed

Two other lower court convictions on traffic charges were affirmed by Judge Huster when the appellants failed to appear. The defendants were Samuel J. Kasekamp, fined $9 for failing to keep to the right center of the highway, and Archibald S. Lahanman, fined a like amount for reckless driving.

Five other criminal appeal cases, most of them involving charges growing out of marital difficulties, were dismissed by the state's attorney, who told the court the couples involved had settled their differences.

All other criminal appeal cases were set for trial today, indicating that the criminal docket will probably be cleared for the term Saturday.

Cumberland Brewery Will Buy $10,000 In Defense Bonds

Directors of the Cumberland Brewing Company voted to purchase $10,000 in defense bonds at their annual meeting recently.

The stockholders and directors meeting held in the company's offices, resulted in the re-election of the following officers: G. William Bibby, president; J. H. Stietly, vice-president and treasurer; Nellie C. Kelley, secretary, and Walter C. Reighard, assistant treasurer.

Directors re-elected for the year are William R. Hubner and Thomas G. Butler, both of Baltimore; Walter G. Distler, Washington; Joseph G. Casey, Scranton, Pa., and Tasker G. Lovendes and G. William Bibby, Cumberland.

Three Men Leave For Navy School

Three men were sent to the Naval Training Station, Norfolk, Va., yesterday by the local navy recruiter and one man was accepted for service, Gerald R. Thomas, of Lonaconing; John J. Ours, of Long; and Paul E. Cuff, of Cresaptown, left yesterday while Charles K. Robey of Paw Paw, W. Va., was accepted for enlistment.

Easier To Be

air raids might cause. They had too many hospitals, too many shrines and too many graveyard sites, he said.

But, at the same time, they greatly under-estimated the importance of the petty, little inconveniences of being bombed," he went on.

It was the little annoyances of not having clean shirts or underwear and such things that brought complaints during the "blitz," rather than the catastrophic nature of the attack, Jopson told the Kiwanians.

"Somehow, the destruction of your house didn't seem as important as the fact that you couldn't shave because your razor was destroyed along with the rest of your belongings," he said.

Describes Destruction in London

London completely blacked out was an awe-inspiring sight, and the absence of lights brought a new beauty to the city, the speaker continued, adding that the balloon barrage guarding the metropolis was also "a thing of beauty." Jopson compared the balloons to huge rainbow-colored fish and said the task of "reeling" them in on a windy day was reminiscent of game fishing.

The embassy attaché described graphically the destruction wrought in the City of London proper, that mile-square area which is the financial and commercial heart of the British empire. The Nazis struck, he said, during low tide on the Thames, which complicated the problem of obtaining water to fight the conflagration.

The "city" had a population of 20,000 but in it worked some one-half million persons. The Nazi raid, however, was on a Sunday night just two days before New Year's, and the area was barren of its working population, Jopson stated.

Thousands of bombs, both explosive and incendiary, were dropped, and soon there were 300 fires in that mile-square area. The flames eventually consolidated into twelve huge conflagrations, which professional and volunteer firemen fought valiantly many of them receiving serious injuries, some of them dying. At the same time, there were 1,000 fires in the metropolitan area.

The destruction was "enormous," said the speaker. Ten out of fifty of the famous Christopher Wren churches were destroyed and the historic Guildhall was badly damaged.

Cathedral Virtually Unharmed

But virtually unharmed stood St. Paul's cathedral, towering above the wreckage surrounding it, its beauty accentuated by the leveling of adjacent structures.

Never in the 2,000-year history of the ancient city had it gone through a period of greater suffering, greater travail or greater glory, Jopson went on. "And if its name should be called again, it will still be there," he added defiantly.

In the rest of London, the damage was severe, but it does not meet the eye on a casual tour, the Kiwanians heard. There is hardly a street which does not bear some scar of the raids but many of them are hidden in one way or another, the speaker reported.

40,000 Dwellings Destroyed

Some 40,000 out of 1,000,000 dwelling houses were destroyed, Jopson said, a figure which he deprecated as "something less than four per cent."

Jopson stressed the fact that the British have never lost their sense of humor and cited several examples to prove it, proving to the satisfaction of the Kiwanians at the same time that the British sense of humor is keen despite legend to the contrary.

The speaker was introduced by James W. Bishop, chairman of the program committee, and the clubmen paid tribute to the speaker and his fellow-countrymen by singing "God Save the King" and "White Cliffs of Dover."

At a brief business session preceding Jopson's address, E. T. Dixon was elected to the board of directors to succeed J. W. Holmes, who resigned. Dixon was unanimously elected after Fred W. Flurshutz, the other candidate nominated by the directors, declined to run.

Great Strides in Industrial Surgery Have Been Recorded in Recent Years

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

A specialty in medical practice which has made great strides in the past few years is that of industrial surgery. It was, of course, natural in a great industrial age that this should be so, but most people do not realize, I believe, how specialized a department it is.

For instance, I find in the magazine which devotes itself to this specialty, Industrial Medicine, the following subjects listed as the ones which have received the largest amount of attention in the industrial field of medicine in the past few years: Dust, lead, silicosis, skin diseases, carbon monoxide, gases, eyes, ventilation, air conditioning, benzene, tuberculosis, workman's compensation and industrial hygiene. A subject which does not appear on this list, but which nevertheless takes up a great deal of the industrial surgeon's time, is burns.

I was especially impressed with the work of the industrial surgeon recently when I visited, with the surgeon in charge, one of the large United States ordnance plants that is being built. I never saw anyone more alert and interested and full of his job, and with a more intelligent grasp of his problems and responsibilities.

Treatment of Burns

One thing that impressed me with the specialization in industrial surgery and also the common sense with which this young man met his problems was in a discussion of the subject of burns. He said that he had a number of burns which were both chemical and heat burns, and he had found out that unless you treat them as chemical burns first, they do not heal.

I asked him how he treated the chemical burns and he said that the first thing he wanted to find out was whether the chemical that did the burning was an acid or an alkali. If it was an acid, he taught the men to put baking soda solution on the burn immediately. If it was an alkali, he taught them to use vinegar and vinegar-soaked gauze on the burn as soon as possible.

Here was not only technical knowledge of the condition, but also the ability to get down to ordinary, every-day life in telling the workmen to use substances on which they could put their hands immediately to counteract the effect of a burn. In any kitchen they could get either baking soda or vinegar—one an alkali and the other an acid. He told me that he had seen some of these burns, which if not treated for the chemical, remained open and sloughing for several months.

Preventive Medicine

As we drove over the plant, I found out that the young doctor was thinking about his job all the time and that he was thinking in terms of prevention. We passed two men who were working on a stalled caterpillar tractor and the doctor said, "I'll bet they haven't even got a first-aid kit with them." He had a real man-sized job in educating the workers to take first-aid kits with them wherever they went and was teaching them how to apply emergency first-aid treatment under all conditions.

I went to the hospital and found that in putting up this plant, they had very sensibly erected the fire house first and the hospital second. It was a well-equipped hospital with all the equipment necessary for first-aid emergency treatment, and also for treatment of common ailments such as colds, sore throats and so forth.

The industrial surgeon does not observe union hours. By the time we got to the hospital, it was almost 7 o'clock in the evening, but the doctor and the nurse were still on the job.

Questions and Answers

T. S.:—What benefit is derived from drinking buttermilk? I have been told that it is very good for colitis, and that it contains bacteria in it that are healing to the colon.

Answer: The advantages of buttermilk are that it is not as tending as ordinary milk in equal amounts and that it is a rather pleasant stimulant to the digestion. Buttermilk itself is not the kind of acid milk which changes bacteria in the colon. This is done by another kind of milk called acidophilus milk.

Middlebourne Man Seeks Tire Patent

Drives Tubeless Tire 14-
000 Miles and Expects
Many More

MIDDLEBOURNE, W. Va., Jan. 22 (AP)—"Something should be done about this," reflected Enoch S. Lemasters, as his automobile with two flat tires, was being towed twenty-five miles by a team of oxen under a hot July sun.

Lemasters had been on a business trip in the lonely Webster county mountains when the tires gave way. He was tired, disgusted, exasperated. The oxen plodded along. "Well, nothing to do but sit back and quit worrying about things." Then came inspiration:

"Why," reasoned Lemaster, "do they have tubes in tires? Oh yes, to contain the air. Everyone knows that. But is it necessary? I wonder—"

It wasn't long until Lemasters' experiments convinced him that the tube wasn't necessary. Today he says, one of the four tubeless tires on his automobiles has been driven 14,000 miles, "and there's no reason why I shouldn't get several more thousands out of it."

Lemaster simply transfers the air valve from the tube to the steel rim of the wheel, on which he has devised a method for keeping the tire attached.

Without a tube, the tire can be patched from the inside without danger of damage, Lemasters points out, and "this means a material saving in rubber."

Lemasters has applied for a patent, and has conferred in Washington on the possibility of turning his idea to use for the national defense, by conserving rubber. "I don't want to commercialize on the idea at this time," he said, "but I sure don't want anybody else to, either."

Bluefield Will Suspend Non-Vital Projects for Duration of War

BLUEFIELD, W. Va., Jan. 22 (AP)—Urging the federal government to suspend non-vital projects for the duration of the war, the Bluefield Chamber of Commerce listed today several of that type in this locality and challenged other cities to do likewise.

Biggest item set forth for deferment until after the war was the Bluestone dam on the New River at Hinton, estimated to cost $22,000,000 and to require 1,500 men three years to complete.

The only non-local project mentioned by the Bluefield chamber's board of directors, which sent its resolution to West Virginia members of Congress, was the St. Lawrence river power project.

"Neither the Bluestone dam nor the St. Lawrence river project tend in any way to promote the war effort," the resolution declared. "To the contrary, by consuming vital man hours and vital war material, they substantially impede the war effort."

The Brownie troop of the Mt. Savage Girl Scouts will meet Friday evening at 6 o'clock in the Mt. Savage high school auditorium.

W. Va. Man Raises 1100 Pound Pig

JENKINSON, W. Va., Jan. 22 (AP)—They're still talking hereabouts of the giant "porker" grown by K. K. Jones, whose interest in hogs pays dividends.

The Tazewell, Va., Packing company which slaughtered the animal reported it weighed 1,100 pounds, which is a lot of lard in any live-stock operator's book.

Jones, an employee of the Pocahontas Fuel Company here, kept the animal on a small tract he leases from the Fuel Company.

Two years ago Jones slaughtered an 816 pound hog.

Thine Own," and "My Faith Looks Up to Thee." In the Methodist hymnal the majority of hymns are of his composing.

Besides the sermon by the pastor, the church choir will sing the anthem, "Let Us Forget," by Kipling. The congregation will participate in a song service which will feature hymns written by Lowell Mason.

At the regular morning service, 11 o'clock, the pastor will conclude his special sermons on the general topic, "Who Is This Galilean," with the preaching of the sermon "Behold Your God."

Farm Outlook Is Most Encouraging, County Agent Says

Potatoes Continue To Be
Most Important Cash
Crop Report Shows

OAKLAND, Jan. 22—That the outlook for farmers in the county was the most encouraging since 1920 was voiced by John H. Carter, county agent, in his annual report for 1941, just completed.

While farmers are faced with the problem of producing more farm products with less labor and less farm machinery, Carter believes they will be receiving a price more comparable to commodities and supplies purchased on the farm. The intentional increase in farm commodities as indicated by the farm defense survey, will mean an extra amount for cash for farmers of the county, he said.

War Means Total Production

Carter, pointing out that total war meant total production, urged that all projects and plans of work in the county be correlated and adjusted to the increased farm production plan as approved by the government. He recommended that farmers accomplish their goal of increased production without increasing capital outlay, wherever possible.

While Carter's report showed the usual activities in dairying, beef cattle, sheep, swine, poultry, cereals, legumes, pastures, potatoes, etc., it was pointed out that potatoes continued to be the most important cash crop, but that there was an increase in dairying, poultry and home gardens particularly.

Dairying in the county is definitely expanding at present due to new markets established. A junior cow project was set up with the Extension Service, Carnation company, the B and O and the vo-ag departments of the high schools, to demonstrate good dairy practices. Two local banks purchased a pure bred Holstein bull to be used by members of the junior cow projects.

The poultry industry has expanded 22.5 per cent in the past ten years and the turkey industry 150 percent, the report showed.

Potatoes continue to be one of the most important cash crops. This year more than 20,000 bushels of Sequoia potatoes, a new variety were produced, in addition to the many other kinds.

Carter said much time was devoted in the county to soil conservation, showing a decided trend toward the conservation of steep land and either by contour or strip farming or removing it from the crop rotation.

Defense Nutrition Work

The importance of reaching directly or indirectly every person in the county in regard to defense nutrition work, was stressed in the recommendations of Mrs. Mildred Barton Hoffman, home demonstration agent, in her annual report.

The 1942 program has been planned with the national emergency before us, she pointed out. It is planned to deal with vital problems now facing the homemaker but is made elastic to change should other emergencies arise.

The homemakers clubs devoted much of their time to home food supplies the past year and many families checked their family food needs to see that they were getting amounts and kinds of foods needed, planned gardens and farms to meet those needs and made improvements in canning and storage.

The income to be reported in this return is gross income (not including income which is wholly exempt from income tax) without any deductions. The taxes in the above table are such that they generally compensate for deductions and credits not allowable if this form is used.

An income tax return is required to be filed by single persons having a gross income (item 3 above) of $750 or more and married persons having a gross income of $1,500 or more. A husband and wife may make a joint return on this form if their combined gross income is not more than $3,000. A separate return may be made on this form if the gross income of the one filing the return is not more than $3,000. If this return is used, it must be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue for your district on or before March 15, 1942. The tax may be paid in equal quarterly installments commencing March 15, 1942. Pay tax, if any, to the Collector and if payment is made by check or money order, make payable to "Collector of Internal Revenue."

MAKING READY FOR MARCH 15—This is a reproduction of the new income tax form, 1040-A, designed for those with gross incomes of $3,000 and under. With this form, many will pay an income tax for the first time. For single persons the exemption this year has been reduced to $750; for married persons the exemption is $1,500. It is expected 10,000,000 persons will use this blank. The rate of tax is 4 per cent. after exemptions, plus a surtax of 6 per cent. on the first dollar of taxable income up to $2,000, and a surtax of 9 per cent. on any portion above the $2,000. In the above form, the Treasury has made allowance for deductions of around 10 per cent. other than those for dependents. However, many who are eligible to claim higher deductions may save money by using Form 1040. Income taxes provide the largest part of United States receipts, 7 billions estimated for 1942 and 11 billions for 1943.

They also helped where they could with school lunches.

The study of rayon dresses, foot health in relation to posture, good material and construction in wool coats for winter use, and similar subjects were also taken up throughout the year. A cotton mattress project resulted in making 411 of them, and placing the min 275 homes.

Reading, music and the study of American countries has been a part of the regular activities of the club in 1941. Besides various other meetings, picnics, camp activities, etc. The 4-H club work was centered around personal development and clothing.

Tire Quota Revealed

The tire rationing quota for Garrett county for February was announced by Louis C. Burr, state rationing administrator and allows the sale of nine tires and seven tubes for passenger cars and motorcycles, and thirty-two tires and forty-five tubes for trucks and buses.

Walter W. Dawson, chairman of the county tire rationing board, announced that during the week from January 15 to 22 seven people got fifteen truck tires and eleven tubes, and five people got five passenger tires and two tubes.

The truck tires were distributed as follows: Carl Richter, Grantsville, one; Pauline Frazer, Friendsville, one; William Luther Nedrow, Friendsville, four; John M. Horchler, Grantsville, four; Walter Charles Bowman, McHenry, two; Russell Ray Lawson, Friendsville, two; Richard Coddington, Friendsville, one.

The passenger car tires went to Dr. Thomas A. Gonder, Jr., Oakland, one; Dr. Robert D. Brown, Friendsville, one; Leslie H. Rodeheaver, Deer Park, one; Albert Baker, Swanton, one; Iva May Layne, Friendsville, one.

This makes a total for January thus far: seventeen persons got thirty-three truck tires and eight persons got eleven passenger tires. The quota is forty-eight truck tires and eleven passenger tires, revealing that no passenger tires can be given out until February.

Marriage Announced

The marriage of Miss Gladys M. Paugh, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Scott Paugh, of Deer Park, to Frank C. Silber, son of Mrs. Alta Silber, of Accident, has been announced. The wedding took place the evening of January 17, at the home of the Rev. and Mrs. Harry V. Scheffer, in Washington, D. C.

Mr. Paugh gave his daughter in marriage. The bride wore a beige suit and brown accessories, with a shoulder corsage of tallman roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Vaude M. Paugh, who was attired in a pink dress with black accessories. The bridegroom had as his best man Raymond Browning of Washington. Mrs. Silber's mother and other relatives and friends attended.

After a short honeymoon, Mrs. Silber will return to Washington, where she is employed in the War department. Silber will return to his duties in the army.

Two years could be added to the life of the average man and woman by a manual physical examination and remedy of defects, according to Dr. Halbert Dunn, chief statistician of vital statistics for the Census bureau. The average life expectancy at birth is now 66.6 years for men and 64.5 years for women.

DON'T WANT HIM

Judge Goldsborough

The Department of Justice has announced that it is seeking to prevent Federal District Judge T. Alan Goldsborough from presiding at the trial of George Sylvester Vlietick, accused Nazi agent, because of the justice's alleged "personal bias and prejudices." Department officials charged that Goldsborough advanced the date of Vlietick's trial on short notice, declaring that it would start on the new date whether or not the government was ready with its case.

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)

THE DAILY STORY

AUTUMN NIGHT

It Must Have Been the Lonely Old House That Got on Her Nerves—but She Was Sure It Was Something Else

(Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.)

By FRANK KEITH

Her grandmother had died on a night like this. The cold autumn had had whined in the evergreens didn't Mattie come home from the movies and why had Tom left this manuscript where she could pick it up and read it!

She remembered her wedding night. The balsam branches, shutting against the window panes, reminded her of Lockwood's dream in Wuthering Heights in which he reaches out to still a fir cone's knocking and pulls in Catherine.

She stared at the manuscript she held. It was the story of a writer who murders his wife in a lonely country house. As she kept reading it she thought of the picture in which Basil Rathbone murdered a string of brides and of Anne Harding's terrified eyes as he read his Bluebeard's diary to her on their wedding night.

She remembered her own wedding night, Tom with his ear against the wall taking notes as a husband and wife quarreled in the room next door. And the day the Barton's baby was buried and Tom taking notes as they drove to the cemetery, using his notebook surreptitiously as the small white coffin was engulfed in soft black earth.

She thought of herself going under ether and Tom taking notes. And Tom at the meat market, notebook in hand as the butcher's knife sank into a neck or leg. She thought of waking in the night to find Tom staring at her.

She'd have to think of something else! She filled the fireplace full of thick chunks of wood, lay down on the lounge and called Greta to lie beside her. The dog was something live and warm, to ward off the night and the effects of that manuscript.

Funny that Mattie hadn't come back yet. She'd never stayed out this late on her day off. What if Tom had told her she needn't come back until morning!

Greta jumped down from the lounge and curled up under it. Jane thought of the Bartons. But that would mean a mile through the woods, and with only a flashlight she might wander off the cart road and get lost.

It was just a co-incidence that both Tom and Mattie had been detained. Maybe Mattie had asked Tom if she could spend the night with her family in town, while she herself had been walking in the afternoon, and Tom had forgotten to mention it. If he just hadn't left that manuscript on the living room table. Ordinarily he kept his papers in his own room. And why hadn't he told her about this particular story? Usually he couldn't wait to tell her about an idea.

The lounge was too short, and uncomfortable to lie on, but the thought of the dark lonely bedrooms upstairs filled her with dread. She tried to go to sleep, the fire was dying down, she began to doze. And then, as though in a nightmare something clawed at her face! Shaking with terror, her hands flew to her eyes. The thing was gone, the room was dark except for the dying embers of the fire.

She nerved herself to say "Greta!" Greta came out from underneath the lounge and cocked her ears. There was no sound, except the wind.

Hanging on to Greta with one hand, and watching the opening between the living room and the hall as she went, she stepped back slowly to a table on which she had left a flashlight lying. The light was gone, but her hand felt a paper packet of matches.

Afraid to strike a match for fear the darkness round her would seem darker, keeping Greta beside her, she began to throw kindling on the embers of the fire and larger pieces of wood upon the flame.

Still watching the door that led to the hallway, she stepped to the table that held the lamp that had been lit when she began to doze. Unscrewing the cap on the brass base that held the kerosene, she struck a match and looked in. It was empty.

The kerosene was in the kitchen. She was afraid to cross the rooms between. And then above the crying of the wind she heard the sound of someone coming up the stairs. A key turned in the lock, the front hall door opened and then Greta was jumping all over Tom. Jane heard him put Greta down and then saw him come into the living room. And suddenly from beneath him a bat fluttered to the further wall. Jane grabbed the table cover and put it over her head.

"Must have come down the chimney before the fire was built," Tom muttered, going after the bat with an andiron.

Jane kept her head covered as he carried it to the door. He examined it carefully before he threw it out. (Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.)

The Census bureau estimates that probably one person will eventually die from tuberculosis out of every twenty who receive holiday mail brightened by Christmas seals.

To maintain a stable population of 150,000,000 in the United States, 2,396,000 babies would have to be born every year. This is slightly above the 2,360,399 births reported to the census for 1940.

"Cross-Patch" Pockets in Vogue

bordered collar. The lowered shoulder seams create a pretty bias yoke effect at the front, and the gathered yoke then give fullness to the bodice. The two central skirt panels are bias—don't the effect interest you? It is slimming on larger figures. A back cut in two sections, a straight belt, and either short, three-quarter or long sleeves complete this attractive design. A contrast collar and pockets are optional too.

Pattern 9969 may be ordered only in misses' and women's sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 4 yards 35 inch.

Send fifteen cents (plus one cent to cover cost of mailing) for this Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your size, name, address and style number.

Sherman's Show Is To Be Reviewed On CBS Network

Defense Bond Concert Is Changing Spot to Fridays

By C. E. BUTTERFIELD

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 — Ransom Sherman is reviving his Hap Hazard comedy-variety show for the CBS network at 10 o'clock Friday night. It first appeared on NBC last summer as a vacation replacement for Fibber McGee. The cast will include Irene Ryan, of the team of Tim and Irene; Singing Martha Tilton and Gordon Jenkins' band.

America Preferred, defense bond concert, is being changed on MBS again. The latest move brings it from Saturday night to 9:30 Friday, guests at the new time to be Joe and Rosina Lievinne, piano team for concert compositions.

Woolcott a Guest
Alexander Woolcott, late of a short visit to London, calls on Clifford Fadiman via NBC-RED at 8:30 to make his fourth visit to Information Please.

Justice Frank Murphy, addressing the Missouri State Bar Association at St. Louis on "The Challenge to Our National Character," will be heard on the BLUE at 10:45.

Tallulah Bankhead is billed for the Kate Smith hour on CBS at 8 p.m. George M. Cohan's new tune, "For the Flag, For the Home, For the Family," will be a feature of Russell Bennett's Notebook over MBS at 8:30.

Klondike Kate
Of Yukon Fame
Has Movie Role
Arrives in Hollywood To Help in Writing
Scenario

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 22 (P)—Klondike Kate, who saw life in capital letters in the Yukon gold rush, is here to spell it out for a movie scenario.

But she's not going to be difficult about it.
"They can do what they want with my story," she said today.
"Wouldn't I be a fine one, telling them how to make a movie? It would be like the director telling me how to ride the Yukon rapids."
Kate is 61, and looks like the average woman in her sixties. She's soft spoken, talks well and behaves like an English boarding school product. Incidentally, she is one.
Only tipoff to her notable past is the expert way she rolls a cigaret.

Proposed by Mail
She prefers talking about her husband, Johnny Matson. They met in a dance hall on Christmas Eve, 1901. Thirty years later, he located her again through a newspaper writeup. He proposed by mail, and they were married in Vancouver in 1933.

"Johnny kept flowers growing on Matson creek all those years," she says. "He told me he knew he'd find me, some day. He's wonderful."

Pressed about the gold rush, she'll tell you times weren't so exciting. Most of it, in fact, was pretty prosaic.

"Dance hall girls have an awful reputation," she observes, "but most of them are clean and decent. And the miners respected them for it."

They were high necked shirt-waists, high button shoes and skirts to the ground. She won't be surprised, but she won't protest, if the movies put them in spangled shorts.

Seldom Sees Johnny
Kate is here from her home in Bend, Ore., to confer with writers at Columbia studios. She's anxious to return home, even more anxious to lure her Johnny away from his Yukon mine. She sees him only alternate years in Dawson for a few weeks, and with the war she isn't sure she'll be able to get there this spring.

"Some day I'll kidnap him," she threatens. "I know I could make him happy in civilization. Why I've gotten so automobiles don't bother me, even in Los Angeles."
Lady, that's something.

Musical Blues Cure London's Blues

Grenadier Guards Band entertains in one of popular lunchtime concerts in Trafalgar Square.

AP Feature Service

LONDON—A potent shot in the arm of Beethoven and boogie-woogie is helping keep up Britain's war nerve to an astonishing degree.

"Good" music is proving good box-office; crowds gather about ancient who push worn hand organs into West End streets to grind out tunes older than themselves; dance halls are packed, symphony orchestras and the ballet are packing 'em in with little of the pre-war type of bally-hoo; phonograph record sales are booming.

"The greatest American after President Roosevelt is Bing Crosby," said one music-lover in government service. Others say something along the same line, but more symbolically.

Londoners quite clearly would be deeply dejected by a prospect of losing this type of entertainment. A number of them, picked at random, said flatly that they could reconcile themselves to any cultural or diversional deprivation except that of music.

The provinces feel the same way, if the crowds that pack every type of musical performance are any guide.

Music hasn't been on the upbeat ever since the war started, however. In the dark days last winter the conflict took a heavy toll of musical enterprises and the London Philharmonic Orchestra was all but liquidated.

Then Jack Hilton, dance orchestra leader, had a hunch, sponsored a cross-country Philharmonic tour. The idea clicked and the musicians played to throngs in all sorts of places.

"We'll keep on playing in the music halls, and if they bomb us out, we'll play in the pubs if necessary," commented Conductor Malcolm Sargent.

The London Symphony likewise took to the road with similar success.

Then Keith Douglas, secretary of the Royal Philharmonic Society, arranged to resume the famous Promenade concerts after the Luftwaffe had knocked them out of Queen's Hall. They were given in Albert Hall, frequently the scene of boxing bouts. Result, all previous attendance records were shattered.

Another striking fact of London's thriving musical life is the lunch-hour concert at the National Gallery. Daily from Monday to Friday a recital of chamber music solo virtuosos and orchestras is given. Myra Hess, well-known pianist, developed the idea into reality, aided by gifts from friends in the United States. Nearly 2,000 artists have entertained audiences in the Gallery, and a movement is under way to make the concert a permanent institution in London after the war.

The Bank of England commenced active operations on the first of January, 1695.

Frostburg State Cagers Defeated By W. Va. Frosh

Little Mountaineer Exhibit Clever Ball-Handling in 44 to 32 Win

FROSTBURG, Jan. 22.—A clever band of ball-handlers representing the West Virginia University Frosh defeated Frostburg State Teachers College cagers here tonight with one of the best exhibitions of team work of the year. It was the Little Mountaineers seventh straight win.

Fans were unanimous in their belief that Walthall, W. Va., Frosh forward, exhibited all that could be desired in the way of shooting and passing. This tricky player got away for several easy "snow-bird" shots under the basket and he passed to teammates for other goals.

His running mate, Reeves, was not far from matching him in these two departments. Reeves looped five goals and one of four foul shots. Stark and Nickrick, Mountaineer cagers contributed eight points apiece toward the victory.

Atty, Nesbitt and Carrington stood out for Frostburg and with their loss on personal fouls in the last quarter the last hope of the Teachers staging a rally was gone. Nesbitt, diminutive forward, slipped in close for four goals and proved to be a thorn in the side of his larger opponents. The lineups:

Frostburg (32)	G.	FG	Pts
Atney, f	3	1-4	7
Nesbitt, f	4	1-1	5
Beil, c	2	0-2	4
Carrington, g	3	2-5	8

CVAL, WMI Games Scheduled Here Tonight

Allegany Faces Bruce; Sentinels Oppose Bulldogs

LaSalle Seeks Eleventh Straight Victory at Ridgeley

A variety of basketball fare will be offered to Cumberland followers of the scholastic brand of the court sport tonight with all local teams scheduled to go into action on local or nearby floors.

Coach Walter L. "Bill" Bowers' Allegany high passers will seek their third straight Western Maryland Interscholastic League victory when they tangle with Bruce of Westernport at Campobello at 8 o'clock following a clash between girls' teams of the two schools. It will be "Loyalty Night" at Allegany and two Hi-Y teams will play at 6 p. m.

The Fort Hill Sentinels, who made their 1942 debut in the Cumberland Valley Athletic League last week by trouncing Hagerstown 32-20, will arrive for their second CVAL triumph when they square off at the Martinsburg High Bulldogs at 8 o'clock at Fort Hill.

The LaSalle High Explorers, who registered their tenth straight victory Wednesday night by routing the Frostburg State College Jayvees, will try for No. 11 at Ridgeley, just across the Potomac river, meeting Coach Bill Hahn's Ridgeley high crew.

Allegany's eagles have captured their last three encounters, defeating Piedmont, Barton and Central of Lonaconing and will go into tonight's skirmish with a record of five victories and three setbacks. A classy performance against Central helped considerably in boosting the stock of the Campers, who are defending WMI honors.

Central boasted an eleven-game winning streak before opening its WMI campaign. After losing to Fort Hill, Coach Mel Henry's crew bowed to Allegany.

The West Siders' opponent, Bruce, has won seven of thirteen games to date and has split even in a pair of loop engagements, defeating Beall and losing to Barton in an extra period.

The Campobello girls will be favored to register their third straight WMI triumph at the expense of the Bruce sextet. The West Side lassies defeated Barton and then shattered Central's home-floor winning streak of more than five years' duration. Cliff Fearer and Stanley Hunter will referee the games.

LaSalle Coach Pat Conway is not taking the clash with Ridgeley too lightly. He remembers that Hahn's outfit rang up six straight victories before losing to Keyser. Bruce and Allegany in its next three starts.

In their last effort, the Ridgeleyites showed signs of recovering from the slump by blasting Moorefield's Yellow Jackets 43-22.

Central at Beall
Prostburg will be the scene of a second WMI doubleheader tonight with Beall high teams playing hosts to Central aggregations. Two close games are in prospect as Central's boys and girls will be gunning for their first loop triumphs. Both Lonaconing crews lost to Fort Hill and Allegany. The Beall quint has won six of ten games, dividing a pair of WMI contests. The Frostburg girls topped Bruce by one point but lost to Fort Hill.

In the Potomac Valley Conference, two skirmishes are on tap this evening with Keyser entertaining the Petersburg Vikings and Mathias traveling to Moorefield. Keyser, one of the section's two undefeated clubs, has won seven straight but faces a threat in Petersburg, which has clicked in recent games after a slow start.

Other games tonight will send Grantsville to Barton, Oakland to Romney to oppose the West Virginia School for the Deaf, Romney to Paw Paw, Belington to Parsons, Bayard to Fort Ashby, Capon Bridge to Boyce and Piedmont to Davis.

No scholastic tussles are carded tomorrow night. However, a collegiate contest will send Westinghouse Tech of Pittsburgh against the Potomac State Catamounts at Keyser.

There are no dummies or blockheads on the St. Louis university cage squad, but the star player of the mid-western quint is named Charlie McCarthy.

Horse Players Mourning The Late Roi Tolleson

NEW YORK, Jan. 22.—You miss half a hundred rainbows for every one you see. The other day a horse handicapper, perched against a bar of fine old near-mahogany, happened to say:

"Did you know Roi Tolleson was dead?"

"Who was Roi Tolleson?" said your correspondent.

El Rio Rey

"Who was he?" said the handicapper, coming reverently to attention. "Why, he was El Rio Rey—the most remarkable guy that ever picked horses for a living. I guess. He was a pioneer in this racket, practically the first to base his selections on past performance, change of weights, workouts, type of track, and the rest of what goes to make up standard form today. He brought home so many long shots when he started out that he had the bookmaking business in a panic. 'And he died last October in Hollywood,' continued the handicapper, 'with an estate consisting of fifty-eight cents and a silver medal he got from the king of the Belgians. He was buried in a new suit donated by a bookmaker. And they carried out his dying request by playing 'When You and I Were Young, Maggie' at the funeral. You ought to look into him."

So your correspondent looked into the career of El Rio Rey, with the help of a fine obituary written for "The Blood-Horse" by David Alexander and a few oddments of fact picked up here and there to fill it out. The reverent handicapper was right. Mr. Tolleson, in his day, was every inch a rainbow.

He was born in Marietta, Ga., in 1884, and used to declaim in later years that he never went twenty minutes in his life without "a snort of drinkin' likker"—though this was no doubt a slight exaggeration, for Tolleson served a two-year hitch in the navy during the first World war, after fifteen years of roving the country as a tramp printer.

"Typical American Sailor"

From the late King Albert of Belgium he received a medal as a "typical American sailor"—a title for which he qualified chiefly by recovering the king's son, then the Crown Prince Leopold, when the latter was lost or strayed for a short time among the docks of Antwerp.

Out of the navy after the war, Tolleson used his modest discharge pay to lease a printshop. There he launched "The Daily Running Horse," perhaps the most famous of all racing papers—famous from the very start, in fact, because of the sensational handicapping of Tolleson under the name of El Rio Rey. His long shots came home in clusters. The story has it that bookmakers began to buy up the "Running Horse" in bundles and toss it into the nearest river.

Tolleson was a storm bird, and lost no time in starting his long fight (no epithets barred) with Moses L. Annenberg, the racing information czar, now a tenant of a Pennsylvania jail. When one of his print plants was wrecked in Chicago, El Rio Rey carried the fight to New York.

He failed with one paper there, losing most of the $750,000 which he was said to have gleaned from the "Running Horse"—and which he used to keep in a box in his room, distrustful of banks. Annenberg bought up the name "Daily Running Horse" but Tolleson kept punching from under the masthead of another paper, "The Daily Racing Star," with editorials that blasted the Annenberg trust with every name the fertile brain of Tolleson could muster up.

New Plant Wrecked

He did thirty days for contempt of court in this connection, and his new plant was wrecked—possibly by his own hand. Eventually, four years ago, he wound up working for his ancient foe as handicapper for "The National Scratch Sheet," of Hollywood. He swashbuckled to the end, wearing a peroxide bearskin in California's hottest weather and even experimenting with high-heeled shoes "to develop the different foot muscles"—though Tolleson was by no means the type you might associate with high-heeled shoes.

Tolleson once wrote of himself: "I am a person of limited attainments." (Continued on Page 19, Col. 8)

Salary Disputes Put Ball Players On Spot This Year

Public Opinion Will Favor Club Owners in Wage Controversies

By WHITNEY MARTIN
Wide World Sports Columnist

NEW YORK, Jan. 22 (Wide World)—Now that the Major League Club owners have been handed a mailed demand with public opinion to swing over the heads of prospective holdouts this year, it is to be hoped they won't use it to pound down wages which the athletes actually are entitled to, and which in normal times they would demand.

We already have mentioned that the players are on something of a spot in that, no matter how legitimate their demands, they are bound to arouse some resentment if they yelp too loudly for higher salaries when so many of their fellow-Americans are toting guns at $21 a month and keep.

Owner Has Advantage
The advantage this gives the owners is apparent. If Joe Hopper sent back his contract with the hesitant suggestion that he thinks he is worth a little more money as he hit 297 last year and didn't field too many balls with his skill, the owner, in announcing that Joe is a holdout, immediately gives the public the impression that Joe is a selfish, run-down heel with blackmail and second story work as skedjives.

In fact, in normal times a too ardent holdout campaign reacts unfavorably for the athlete. Joe Di Maggio was booed lustily for quite some time a few years ago after he had declined to sign until the season was already a week old.

But, after all, the players are entitled to some consideration. Sure, they are playing a game, but it is a business with them, and just as legitimate a business as running a hardware store or flag-pole sitting.

And they can't be blamed for trying to get as much out of it as they can while the getting is good, as their careers are over about the time a doctor or dentist is just beginning to speak of his patients instead of his patience.

In a way a ball player is just collecting back wages when he asks for a raise. His argument can't be based on what he will do this year, as nobody knows what he'll do. He might break a leg in the first game.

Paid for Past Performance

His talking point is past performance, so in reality he will be paid for what he already has done. If Joe Di Maggio gets a substantial boost this year, which he unquestionably is entitled to, it will be as a reward for his services of last year, both as a player and as a gate attraction.

You can't blame a ball player for asking for a raise after he has had a good year any more than you can blame the salesman, Poison Gulch District, for the Eureka Pistol and Tombstone Company for requesting the same thing after his report showed his products co-operating nicely.

Interest in holdouts usually is centered on a few stars who have had outstanding seasons, but for every Di Maggio or Williams or Feller, there are a score of fellows drawing down modest checks who think they deserve modest raises.

The only trouble these fellows face is that they might be greeted (Continued on Page 19, Col. 8)

Kentucky Legislature To Consider Ban on Horse Racing during War Time

FRANKFORT, Ky., Jan. 22. (AP)—A bill before the Kentucky General Assembly proposing to abolish horse racing in the Bluegrass State for the duration of the war "doesn't stand a chance of passing," a leader in the House of Representatives said today.

The measure was introduced yesterday by Representative Pink Curd of Calloway county who is a breeder of saddle horses.

Curd said he didn't have anything against horse racing but that "the sport just isn't in harmony with the war effort."

Lou Novikoff Is Trying To Shed Fat In Comeback Effort

'Mad Russian' of Chicago Cubs Hopes to Regain Batting Heights

By ROBERT MYERS

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22. (AP)—Baseball's Lou Novikoff got on the scales and proved to one and all he hasn't been idle this winter. The pointer journeyed up to 206 pounds.

"I'd have fainted dead if it'd gone a notch higher," confessed a witness, Coach Bill Sweeney of the Los Angeles club.

"I'll get down to 195 in two weeks and 185 by the time spring training comes," promised the embarrassed Mr. Novikoff, whose best hitting poundage is around 182.

There was some conflict over the exact nature of the Chicago Cub outfielders' occupation this winter, but he was generally understood he's been tolling in the nearby oil fields.

Gives Chop Houses Workout

It seemed probable, too, that he's been doing heavy work in the lunch rooms and chop houses.

"He must have been working overtime," commented the ex-Cub executive, now Los Angeles president, Clarence Rowland, neglecting to specify in which endeavor Lou had been laboring the most.

One thing is certain about the likeable Russian, who was a hero last spring, a bum last summer and a hero again last fall in some places. When he said he'll get in shape, he will, or tear down a couple of oil derricks in the effort. The main difficulty, though, is that a couple of torn down oil derricks won't help Novikoff, the Cubs or the man who owns the derricks.

You'll remember that Lou was the "Rookie of the Year" until the year got started. Then his caunted hitting power became almost extinct, and off he went to Milwaukee.

Led A. A. Batters
There Manager Charley Grimm applied something miraculous, because the Novikoff bat bombed again, and he wound up leading American Association hitters with a .370 average.

His National League figure for his fifty-four games stands at a blushing .241, however, so the terror of five Minor Leagues has yet to prove his Major League worth. And before he can do that he'll have to prove to his manager, Jimmy Wilson, that he can leave 20 or 25 pounds in those oil fields.

Frank McCormick, first baseman of the Cincinnati Reds, was the hardest player in the National League to fan last season. He whiffed only thirteen times.

Odd Record Breakers

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 22.—Record breaking has many odd angles that often remain hidden behind the scenes. Gene Fowler, author, poet and the sage of Hollywood, insists that Barney Oldfield, the veteran auto racing driver, is the all-time leader when it comes to a matter of uniqueness.

"Barney learned to drive a car one morning," Gene says, "and he broke a world's record that same afternoon."

This happens to be 100 per cent true. Henry Ford, looking for a chance to test one of his new cars, turned the job to Barney and his mastodontic cigar. Barney spent an hour or so learning how the different gadgets worked and a few hours later gave his machine the gas, proving a car could be driven at a faster pace than a mile a minute.

If asked to take the chance, Oldfield also would have been the first to try driving a car from the top of a skyscraper.

Another Entry

While playing golf with Johnny Weissmuller, we discovered the Tarzan swimmer also had been a feature in the unique division.

Johnny, after turning in a 71 at Lakeside, said, "The first time I ever swam in competition I set a new world's record at one hundred yards. The second time I started I happened to break this first record."

The difference between Weissmuller and Oldfield is that Johnny had been in hard training under a competent coach for some time. But even this doesn't detract from the performance of the most remarkable natural swimmer who ever lived—and one of the great competitors.

Weissmuller now is busy showing chimps how to climb trees and throw coconuts.

Two Others

Two other unique record breakers are Cornelius Warmerdam at the pole vault and Les Steers at the high jump—two high-flying Californians. Warmerdam discovered that the only way he could pass 15 feet was to get his right arm out of the way in time. Steers discovered that the only way he could beat six feet ten inches over the lofty cross bar was to get his left foot out of the way before it carried away the bar.

"I could get my left hand and left arm away in time at fifteen feet or better," Warmerdam, the high school instructor, said. "It was the right arm that gave me all the trouble. I worked at this knack and I also worked hard at the job of increasing my speed. In the beginning I ran the hundred in eleven and a half seconds. Later on I got this speed down to ten and two-fifths seconds."

With these two things accomplished Warmerdam soared above 15 feet at least seven times in one year, finally reaching the incredible height of fifteen feet five and three-quarter inches. His goal is now sixteen feet, given the time to practice.

About Steers

There were vague rumors and reports years ago that certain Zulu African jumpers could equal six feet ten inches. These rumors never were verified.

But back in June, 1941, at a Pacific Coast Conference meet, Lester Steers, the Oregon university rubber-man proved a human being could clear the bar at six feet eleven inches.

In an effort to control a balky left foot, he would train wearing

Human Limit

Charley Paddock, the first of "The Fastest Humans," had a new 100-yard record in sight one afternoon when he suddenly discovered that his leg ligaments would not stand that much strain.

He realized, hearing the eighty-yard mark, that he was on his way to at least a 9 and one-fifth mark when he felt that one or more ligaments were about to crack. Not wishing to remain a cripple he eased up to tie the existing world mark.

There is always an argument as to what the final human limit is. Dean Cromwell of Southern California, one of the great track coaches and trainers of all time, doesn't believe there is any such set mark. His idea is that year by year there will be a slight increase in speed, stamina and other needed ingredients and that no record ever can be considered entirely safe.

This sounds reasonable. There is sure to be a halting period until the war is over and the world turns back to a new boom in competitive sport.

But there is little chance that anyone will quite equal the unique performances of Barney Oldfield and Johnny Weissmuller in setting new records at their first attempts. New records in every field have now been set at a clip too keen to be beaten by any first starters.

Mountain State Ball Club Loses Long-Time Sponsor

E. S. "Lefty" Hamilton Is 'Through' with Williamson Red Birds

WILLIAMSON, W. Va., Jan. 22. (P)—The Williamson Red Birds lost their sponsor today, further beclouding the future of the turbulent Mountain State Baseball League.

President E. S. "Lefty" Hamilton, who had operated the club here since the league was organized in 1937, announced that he would not have time for the game and that he was "definitely through" with the Red Birds.

He left the way open for someone else to assume control of the club, the only stipulation being that the new owner or owners assume the debts.

Hamilton indicated he had several inquiries from individuals and groups interested, but that they had backed down after hearing of the debts, which, it was learned, reliably amount to between $1,000 and $2,000.

Huntington, another member of the six-team league, lost its playing field in an attachment proceeding last fall, and the Huntington directors have not disclosed whether they will make an effort to operate again.

Meanwhile, Bluefield, Logan, Welch and Ashland, Ky., have indicated readiness to field teams again, and it is known that Portsmouth, O., has shown interest in obtaining a franchise.

The members, at a stormy annual meeting in Huntington last Sunday, deposed Ray Ryan, president and organizer of the league, and elected Robert C. Caldwell of Ashland as president by a 3-2 vote.

Cards To Operate Allentown's Club In Interstate Loop

ALLENTOWN, Pa., Jan. 22. (AP)—Allentown's entry in the Class Interstate Baseball League will operate as a St. Louis Cardinals farm club during the 1943 season, President Alvin Butz announced tonight.

Allentown worked with the National League Phillies last year.

Fort Hill Cagers Win over Barton Teams

Sentinel Boys Triumph 45-36 In Tough Game

Hinkle Loops Eleven Goals; Inskeep Shines for Barton Lassies

BARTON, Jan. 22.—Fort Hill high school's boys and girls basketball teams won a double victory here tonight over defeated but undaunted Barton high cage teams in WMI League contests.

In the main game the long shot of the Sentinels' Hinkle scuttled the Barton team which fought gamely but without avail. Hinkle "plunked in" eleven field goals, the majority from beyond the fifteen-foot marker, and converted three out of five charity tosses to rack up twenty-five points for the Cumberlanders.

Hinkle's teammate, Decker, looped three two-pointers, and dumped in four or five foul tries to capture runnerup scoring honors with ten points. Conway, Fort Hill guard, came through with three goals at opportune times.

Schramm and McCutcheon bore the brunt of Barton's scoring effort with five and three field goals respectively. Bradley, a forward, also came through with three goals and two of three foul tosses. Fort Hill had to hustle to win the game as the Barton boys never gave up and fought to the last whistle against a team which is among the best in the WMI league.

The Cumberland team held only a one point margin at the end of the first period and had increased its lead by just two more points at the half-time. In the third quarter the Fort Hill team went into a five point lead and with Hinkle meshing several long shots the Sentinels slowly pulled away in the final quarter from their tenacious adversary.

The girls' game was almost a duplicate of the boys' battle with Fort Hill's favored lassies forced to stave off a last half rally by the Barton girls. Standout player in this game was Inskeep, Barton's clever forward. She looped six field goals and also converted four of five foul shots to score sixteen of her team's nineteen markers.

The Cumberland girls won out through a better balanced team shooting. Betty Cane meshed five goals and one foul while P. Smith was close behind with four goals and two of three fouls. The lineups:

SAFETY-FILL BATTERIES

Southeastern Conference May Play Freshmen

Several Football Coaches Believe Such a Move May Be Necessary

By BEY YOUNG
Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 22 (AP)—Southeastern Conference schools, their athletic ranks thickening steadily due to armed service calls, may call on freshman manpower to bolster varsity football squads this year.

The much-banded proposal, on which conference coaches and athletic directors are about equally divided at present, likely will be aired fully at a special SEC meeting in Atlanta next March.

"It looks like it'll be necessary for us to play freshmen," declared Coach Red Sanders of Vanderbilt. "With our small squad (33 men last year) it'll hurt us a lot more to lose five men than it would for some of the others to lose 12 or 15."

May Initiate Move
Sanders indicated Vandy would be willing to initiate a move to have the eligibility rules changed "if nobody else did."

Down, Georgia way, however, Coach Wallace Butts and his victorious Orange Bowlers aren't particularly sold on the plan.

"Whether we win or whether we lose, it would be better for football to avoid playing freshmen except as a last resort to keep the game going," declared the roly poly Georgian. "We've lost more players than anybody and we still could get up a team without playing freshmen."

Railbirds figure however that if All-America Frankie Sinkwich returns next year, Butts could chuck a few coeds into the lineup and still have quite a football team.

Tulane's athletic director Dr. Wilbur C. Smith thought the use of freshmen "essential for continuance of our schedules and should help the game of football," while the school's coach, Lowell (Red) Dawson said:

"I'm not sure the use of freshmen will be essential, but in another month we'll have a better idea."

Move May Be Necessary
Auburn's Jack McEacher and Kentucky's AB Kirwin both are opposed to using first year men unless it becomes absolutely necessary.

Kirwin, said, however, that of 45 players eligible for varsity football next fall, he expected to lose about 20, and because of that it would almost be necessary to use freshmen.

Although Coach John Barnhill of Tennessee "would rather not use freshmen," in his opinion there's a 50-50 chance they'll be made eligible for varsity competition, Florida and University of Mississippi spokesmen approved the idea.

Boudreau Plans New Method in Spring Training

Infielders and Outfielders Will Report Two Days after Batterymen

CLEVELAND, Jan. 22 (AP)—Lou Boudreau swept into a deep bow today to the Cleveland Indians whose springtime rumble is: "We don't have batting practice, we have pitching practice."

Proving he has ideas of his own and is losing no time putting them into effect, the "boy manager" is having his infielders and outfielders report to the Clearwater, Fla., training camp only two days after pitchers and catchers arrive Feb. 23.

"We're conducting something of an experiment," the flashy 24-year-old shortstop conceded. "I don't know of any other club which doesn't get the pitchers at least five days' start."

"But I think we'll get better results if we bring our hitters and pitchers through the training season at just about the same pace. A batter has a hard time getting started if he has to step in cold against pitchers who are putting plenty of stuff on the ball."

Boudreau is confident that by the third day in camp most pitchers will be ready to throw the ball from the box to home plate—and that's all the newly-reported batters will want them to do.

"It's possible that the older pitchers will take longer than that to get ready," he added, "but there always are plenty of youngsters in shape to throw almost the minute they report."

Sports observers reckoned the experiment couldn't do any harm. Under the old scheme the Indians finished a poor seventh in team batting last year, their anemic 256 topping Chicago by just one point.

O'Connor Names Defense Industries Committee Here

Group Will Try To Obtain War Industry Contracts For All Local Factories

Will Also Assist Committee Now Functioning Here for Purpose of Securing Sub-contracts for Smaller Plants; Edmund S. Burke Is Named Chairman; Group Will Meet Soon

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 22 (P)—Governor O'Connor today appointed a Defense Industries committee composed of five men to help facilitate continued operation of Cumberland's leading industrial plants seriously affected by priorities and lack of supplies.

Primary function of the committee, the governor said, will be to obtain enough war industry contracts to keep the plants operating at full capacity.

At the same time, the committee will assist the committee now functioning in Cumberland for the purpose of securing subcontracts for smaller plants in the area. O'Connor declared.

Named to the group were:

Edmund S. Burke, general manager of Cumberland's Kelly-Springfield plant, chairman; Fred T. Small, Celanese Corporation plant manager; George A. Meyers, president of the Maryland and District of Columbia Industrial Union Council; Isaac Hirsch, bank director and hide dealer, and Attorney General William C. Walsh.

O'Connor also said he would appoint a Transportation Co-ordination committee in the near future as a second step toward the solution of Cumberland's industrial problems.

He said testimony presented by city officials and representatives of the various interests concerned indicated that the transportation problem around Cumberland is not so much lack of transportation facilities as it is a lack of co-ordination, and therefore of full utilization of the existing adequate facilities.

The committee named today, the governor said, "will be asked to meet and organize immediately to the end that they may promptly take up and expedite efforts already initiated in Washington on behalf of some of the plants concerned."

Fort Hill High School Receives Three Documents

Presentation Is Made by William G. Pomeroy, of Exchange Club

Framed replicas of the Bill of Rights, Lincoln's Gettysburg Address and the Star Spangled Banner were presented yesterday to Fort Hill high school by William G. Pomeroy, representative of the Cumberland Exchange Club, at the regular assembly period of the school.

Victor D. Heisey, principal, accepted the gifts in behalf of the school.

The remainder of the program was presented by the music department under the direction of Robert O. Klepper and Miss Dorothy Seebree. An exhibition in bator twirling by the beginners' class was given under the direction of Miss Wilda Lovestien.

The program also included a clarinet trio by John Weber, William Dillon and Robert Tomsko, members of the band; a recitation, "The Three Trees," by Albert Welshans, assisted by the band; a moving picture entitled "Symphony Orchestra."

Miss Dorothy Seebree led the student body in community singing and Emlyn Burkhardt sang, "My Own United States."

Lorraine Partleton, student council president, led the opening exercises and Evangeline Engle read the Scripture. Jane Kester acted as mistress of ceremonies.

Brother of Local Man Begins Flight Training with Army

Aviation Cadet Lincoln S. Strachan, son of the late Dr. Hugh Strachan, Harrison street, this city, has begun flight training at Kelly Field, Texas, after completing preliminary training.

He is a member of the first wartime class to complete the basic military training and ground school instruction at the replacement center at Kelly Field. Strachan will now be given an intensive course in flight tactics and other aviation pointers.

Scottish Rite Group Buys $10,000 Worth Of Defense Bonds

Purchase of $10,000 worth of defense savings bonds by the Scottish Rite bodies of Cumberland was announced last evening by Leander Schaidt, secretary.

The Scottish Rite bodies comprise Meredith Lodge of Perfection, Kedron Chapter, Cumberland Council and Cumberland Consistory.

Schaidt said that the bonds have been purchased and have been placed in a local bank.

The Scottish Rite bodies also have contributed $100 to the "Save-the-Y" campaign also a sustaining membership in the same drive.

Jurist To Study Law and Evidence In Moore Trial

Judge Huster Says Issue Is Whether Driver Was "Grossly Negligent"

Associate Judge William A. Huster took under advisement yesterday the question of whether William Arthur Moore, 21-year-old Mexico Farms school bus driver, was guilty of "gross negligence" which resulted in the death of six-year-old Lawrence Malampy on the Christie road last November 12.

That is the sole issue in the case, Judge Huster commented as arguments of opposing counsel were concluded at 2:30 p. m. If Moore was "grossly negligent" in the discharge of youthful passengers from the school bus, then he is guilty of manslaughter, the jurist stated.

Tried under New Law

Much of the argument of the attorneys in the case was devoted to the question of the meaning of the term, "gross negligence" in Maryland's new traffic fatality statute.

Moore is the second person to be tried under the new law, which defines as manslaughter the killing of a person by an automobile or other vehicle as a result of "gross negligence" and provides maximum penalties of three years imprisonment or a fine of $1,000, or both.

Formerly, drivers blamed for traffic fatalities were tried under the homicide statutes, with the definition of manslaughter going back to the common law. Maximum penalty under this statute is ten years imprisonment.

Judge Huster said he was "inclined to believe" that the Malampy boy's hand or clothing was caught in the door of the school bus. If he should find that true, he went on, then the question would arise whether that happened as a result of "gross negligence" on Moore's part.

Will Study Authorities

The answer to that question the jurist said he was not prepared to announce immediately. He declared he would study the authorities cited by the lawyers in their arguments and hand down his decision "in the near future."

Describing the case as "rather unusual," Judge Huster pointed out that it was considerably different from the first trial under the new law in October, when Melvin Cuthbertson, 29, of Carlos, was convicted of manslaughter in the automobile crash death of Marshall G. Entler.

"Save the Y" Campaign Workers Will Give Second Report Tonight

Poster and Slogan Competition Indicates Interest of Young People

The second of three report meetings, scheduled in the Save the "Y" Campaign will be held this evening at 6:15 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. gymnasium. According to E. S. Burke, general chairman, workers have been urged to report every contribution they can tonight, so that a good report will be received.

The first report meeting last Tuesday showed about $8,000 already contributed in cash toward the $35,000 goal and $5,500 pledged in memberships in the $20,000 sustaining membership plan.

BUSY IN "Y" CAMPAIGN—Miss Ruth Denny, one of six girls working in the Save the "Y" campaign office is seen here sorting prospect cards for workers. Cards were typed for practically every employed person in the city, so all could be given an opportunity to contribute something to the fund. Leaders contend if every person contacted by workers, contributes the success of the campaign is assured. But if people do not co-operate, the Y.M.C.A. will be sold and lost to the city forever, campaign leaders assert. The second report in the campaign to raise $35,000 by Feb. 2 will be made at a meeting of team captains and leaders at the Y tonight.

Allegany High Holds Inaugural Air Raid Drill in 40 Seconds

Allegany high school held its first air raid drill yesterday and the entire student body of approximately 1,600 boys and girls moved from the third to second floor and from the basement to first floor in the last time of forty seconds, Ralph R. Webster, principal, announced last evening.

Teachers were advised in advance that a drill would be held yesterday but the fact was kept secret from the pupils until the time the alarm was sounded.

Webster said that drills will be held regularly at Allegany but no advance warning will be given.

Victor D. Heisey, principal, gave instructions for the air raid drill to be held one day next week, at the regular assembly period yesterday in Fort Hill high school.

Charles L. Kopp Named Registrar For Third Draft

Hours and Dates of Registration in Schools Announced at Meeting

Charles L. Kopp, superintendent of Allegany county public schools, was sworn in yesterday as general registrar for the third selective service registration which will be conducted throughout the county February 14, 15 and 16, at a meeting of officials of the four local draft boards in the Union street county office building.

Bruce Gives Oath

The oath of chief registrar was administered by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., chairman of Local Draft Board No. 2, and Kopp now has the power to swear in the principals and the latter in turn the teachers who will be enlisted to help register approximately 7,200 men between the ages of twenty and forty-five.

Kopp last evening said that all of the schools in the county will be used for the registration and that practically all of the teachers will volunteer to do the work of registrars. Brother Dacian Stephen, principal, and the faculty of LaSalle high school, also will be asked to participate. Each registrar will be asked to sign a waiver of compensation.

Hours of Registration

Schools will be open for registration on Saturday, February 14 from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Sunday, February 15, from 1 to 5 p. m., and Monday, February 16, from 7 a. m. to 9 p. m. The official registration day is February 16 but it is hoped that as many as possible will register.

Constitutionality Of City Charter Clause Attacked

Appeals Court Asked To Outlaw Section Concerning Damage Claims

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 22 (P)—Margaret Engle asked Maryland's court of appeals today to reverse a lower court's decision denying her $15,000 damages for injuries suffered when she allegedly fell over a sidewalk water pipe in Cumberland, October 3, 1940.

Through her attorney, David Kaufman, she attacked the constitutionality of a clause in the Cumberland city charter invalidating a claim of damages against the municipality unless the city had received notice of a street obstruction "twenty-four hours prior to the occurrence of the injury."

Charles Z. Heskett, counsel for Cumberland, argued that the city charter includes phraseology which reads, "the City of Cumberland shall never be liable on account of any damages x x x unless certain conditions have been met."

Heskett contended the woman had not followed the conditions of the clause and that the city's demurrer, sustained by the lower court, should be affirmed by the court of appeals.

Five Births Are Announced Here

Kelly President, Defense Officials Confer in Capital

Plant Placed at Government's Disposal for War Production Work

WASHINGTON, Jan. 22 (P)—Edmund S. Burke president and general manager of the Kelly-Springfield plant at Cumberland, Md., conferred with defense officials here today in what he described as a mutual effort to obtain orders for his plant and to place the concern's productive capacity at the disposal of the government.

He said that with rubber supplies limited and rationed he felt that there was much that the Kelly-Springfield company might do towards producing other necessities in the war effort.

Burke said that he was not ready or at liberty to disclose progress of his talks. He said his company was continuing to manufacture truck tires, but that it was possible there might be some conversion of machinery for other products.

Library Expects To Collect 1,000 Books by Feb. 1

Miss Walsh Declares Response Is Undoubted Proof of Patriotism

Cumberland citizens are proving their undoubted patriotism by their generous response to the call for books in the Victory Book Campaign, according to Miss Mary G. Walsh, librarian, of the Cumberland Free Public Library, Washington street.

"Books of all kinds are being brought to the library, most of them in excellent condition, Miss Walsh said.

"Boy scouts are bringing books collected from their neighbors, while the library readers from all parts of Cumberland, from the rural districts and even from West Virginia appear every day with many volumes to add to the hundreds already donated.

"This is one more case of 'not what you give, but what you share' for the books have already been enjoyed by the donors, and they know they are worth reading."

Many readers are bringing in their Christmas gift books as they finish reading them, Miss Walsh asserted.

The Cumberland Free Public Library expects to have more than 1,000 books on hand for the Victory Book Campaign before February 1.

"Give the Armed Forces Books You'd Like to Read Yourself," is the slogan of the campaign.

Cresaplow First Aid Class Starts Tonight

All residents of the Cresaplow area interested in taking Red Cross first aid training are urged to report at an organization meeting at 6:30 o'clock tonight at the Cresaplow school. Harry Grimes will be instructor for the course.

Charles B. Davis Dies at Home

Charles B. Davis, 67, of 179 Thomas street, formerly a tin worker in the Taylor Tin Plate mill here, died yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock at his home of a heart attack following an illness of one year.

Mr. Davis was a member of the Church of the Brethren.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Martha Hinkle Davis; two sons, Charles, Cresaplow, and Lester, this city; and five daughters, Miss Rebecca Davis, at home; Mrs. W. C. Grapes, Struthers, Ohio; Mrs. Richard Thomas, Youngstown, Ohio; Mrs. Thomas Mitchell, Winchester, Va., and Mrs. Raymond Hipsey, this city.

The body will remain at the home, 179 Thomas street.

'Easier To Be Bombed Than Bored,' Says British Embassy Attache

People of England 'Tremendously Cheerful,' Kiwanians Are Told

The British people are "tremendously cheerful" despite the war and are not worrying about the prospects of renewal of large-scale German bombing raids or an invasion attempt, according to R. Keith Jopson, commercial secretary of the British embassy at Washington.

Speaking at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Fort Cumberland hotel, Jopson painted a glowing picture of the morale of the British, declaring that the spirit of the people was "impossible to describe."

"It was as if their spirit had been refined and purified by mass suffering," he said. "The brotherhood and unselfishness of the people of London, rich and poor alike, was amazing during the great blitzkrieg. There were no class distinctions at all."

Relating in a clipped British accent the story of England under bombs, Jopson said the actual start of the German air attack came as a relief from what America called the "phony war."

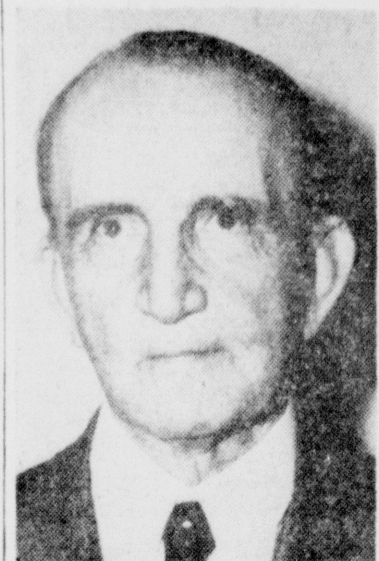

"It's easier to be bombed than to be bored," he told the Kiwanians, adding that the feel of the "lash on our backs" restored to the British the self-respect they lost "in the awful days of appeasement."

The embassy attache declared that the British, before the outbreak of war, greatly over-estimated the casualties and damage which

Brief Illness Is Fatal to Local Insurance Agent

John R. Kirkpatrick, Sr., Native of Lonaconing, Dies in Hospital

John R. Kirkpatrick, Sr., 58, of 449 North Centre street, agent for the Eureka-Maryland Assurance Corporation here, died yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in Memorial hospital following an illness of ten days.

A native of Lonaconing, Mr. Kirkpatrick was a son of the late John and Agnes Boyd Kirkpatrick.

For fifteen years he was steward of the county home before he entered the employ of the insurance company. Mr. Kirkpatrick was a member of Cumberland Lodge No. 60, Knights of Pythias.

Surviving are one daughter, Miss Mary A. Kirkpatrick; one son, John R. Kirkpatrick, Jr., both at home, and three sisters, Miss Agnes Kirkpatrick, Newark, N. J.; Miss Nell Tomorovitch, Cleveland, Ohio; and Mrs. Agnes Peel, Ambler, Pa. His life, Mrs. Margaret Marshall Kirkpatrick, died in 1933.

The body will remain in St. Ignace chapel where funeral services will be conducted Saturday afternoon by the Rev. William A. Eisenberger, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Interment will be in Rose Hill cemetery.

Rubber Workers Will Meet Here To Discuss Defense Employment

Due to the fact that a large number of members of Local No. 2, United Rubber Workers of America, have been furloughed from the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company plant, because of the restrictions on the use of rubber, officials of the union urge that all members be present at the regular meeting tomorrow at 7:30 p. m.

Possibilities of obtaining defense employment will be discussed and a plan for purchasing defense bonds will be passed upon, according to Raymond C. Burkhardt, president of Local No. 26.

A representative of the international is expected to be present at this meeting.
